COLONEL BENJAMIN CLEVELAND

Benjamin Cleveland was apparently quite an impressive man, and at times somewhat controversial. He was born, according to most sources, on the Blue Run, Orange County, Virginia, on May 26, 1738. In reading the history of this man, and attempting to summarize his character in a few words, it would be "a restless, somewhat impatient, exploring man, who still had the best qualities to render him kind and considerate to those with whom he dealt, and who deserved it". His early life was that which exemplified the restless and exploring nature, later to mature into a leader of men in the Revolutionary War, and then to spend his waning years participating in community affairs.

The various sources list two places in Virginia for his birth: on Bull Run in Prince William County, and on Blue Run in Orange County. Records of Orange County show a deed for 600 acres to John Cleveland, his father, in 1734 which was about four years before he was born. About the year 1757 Benjamin married Mary Graves, daughter of Joseph and Sarah Graves. The will of Joseph Graves tells all we know of this family:

Surry County, North Carolina, August Court 1774.
In the name of God Amen. I Joseph Graves being very sick and weak but of perfect mind and memory thanks be to God calling into mind the mortality of body and knowing that it is appointed for all men once to die do make and ordain this my Last Will and Testament. That is to say principally and first of all give and recommend my soul into the Hands of Almighty God that gave it and my body I recommend to the earth to be buried in decent Christian burial at the discretion of my executors. Nothing doubting but at the resurrection I shall receive the same again by the Almighty Power of God. And touching such worldly estate wherewith it has pleased God to bless me in this life I give devise and dispose of the same in the following manner and form.

First I bequeath to Sarah my dearly beloved wife the third part of my worldly estate with all my house and goods and hearth effects together with all my lands and tenements and the remainder equally divided between Absalom Cleveland and John Cleveland, sons of Mary Cleveland my beloved daughter. This my estate to be equally divided: my wife at my death to receive her equal part and the other two parts to be securely kept in the hands of my executors until the above named Absalom Cleveland and John Cleveland arrive at the age of twenty one years and I hereby require and devise that Benjamin Cleveland the husband of my beloved daughter and Jesse Walton shall be my executors. This my Last Will and Testament in witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this 12th day of July in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy four.

In presenting a synopsis of the life of Benjamin Cleveland, we have collected much valuable information from the Draper Manuscripts. Dr. Lyman C. Draper, a Secretary of the Wisconsin Historical Society, in the mid 19th century, corresponded with hundreds of people in preparation for his book, King's Mountain and Its Heroes. He was a meticulous researcher who contacted everyone who knew anything about the Cleveland family. His manuscript collection is now on 30 rolls of microfilm. Only a small amount is devoted to the Clevelands, but even so, his coverage consist of hundreds of letters and memoranda. Many were from direct descendants, from neighbors, military and civilian associates. Benjamin's brothers were famous men in their own right, but the fame of Ben has overshadowed all others.

Other good sources on the life and times of Benjamin Cleveland are found in the writings of Dr. J.B.O. Landrum and Benjamin F. Perry. Dr. Landrum wrote Colonial and Revolutionary History of Upper South Carolina. Benjamin F. Perry, Provisional Governor of South Carolina in 1865, also added accounts of Ben and his descendants in his Biographical Sketches of Eminent Statesmen. A monument was erected July 28, 1887, at Fort Madison, South Carolina, to the memory of Colonel Benjamin Cleveland. This event was covered in the Greenville, South Carolina newspaper.

It has been said that Ben Cleveland did not receive the benefits of an early education, being limited to "reading, writing, and arithmetic to the rule of three". During his early years in Virginia, he spent most of his time in the wilderness collecting furs and pelts for the ready market available. It was said by one writer that he, "like Daniel Boone, had an aversion to the tame drudgery of farm life". It has also been said that his marriage to Mary Graves did little to tame his ways. It is said that he was fond of horse racing, gaming, and other wild sports common to frontier life. It is also said that he fought in the French and Indian Wars, but this is not proven.

New land was being opened by the Crown in the western part of the Province of North Carolina about the year 1765. Land which needed settlers to push the Indians further west. About 1769, Benjamin Cleveland came from Orange County, Virginia, with his wife Mary, her father Joseph Graves and his family, and Ben's brother, Robert. They settled near the foot of the Blue Ridge on the waters of Roaring River, a northern tributary of the Yadkin, in what was then Rowan County, later Surry County, and a few years later Wilkes County, North Carolina. Ben opened a farm with the aid of Mr. Graves' servants. He raised stock and devoted much of his time to hunting. He later relocated to the northern bank of the Yadkin and established his home which was known as the "Round About", having taken its name from the horse-shoe shape of the river, and nearly surrounded by water. Daniel Boone was among the earliest of the pioneer settlers of the Yadkin Valley. It was from Boone that Ben heard of the Kentucky country with its abundance of wild game, wild charm, and rich lands. In the summer of 1772, along with Jesse Bond, Jesse Walton, Edward Rice, and William Hightower, he set out on a trip of exploration and hunting in quest of this far land of Kentucky. Upon reaching the Cumberland Gap they were met by and plundered by a party of Cherokee. They lost their guns and horses and were told to leave the Indian hunting grounds. They had no alternative but to return to their settlement. Several months afterwards in an adventure with chosen friends, Cleveland recovered his horses from the noted Cherokee Chief, Big Bear.

Cleveland's hunting days were coming to an end. The news of Colonial taxation by the King and Parliament reached the Yadkin Valley, and he was among the first to resent the threatened tyranny. During 1775, when his neighbors and friends of the Upper Yadkin Valley went to Cross Creek (now the City of Fayetteville) to sell their surplus products and purchase supplies of iron, sugar, salt, and other necessities, they were compelled to take the oath of allegiance to the king before they were permitted to sell and buy. When the Cherokees were enticed by the British into hostilities, Captain Cleveland, in the summer of 1776, served a tour of duty as a scout on the western frontier of the state. In the fall of 1776, when General Rutherford led a strong force against the Cherokee, Ben and his company went on the campaign in the Surry Regiment under Colonel Joseph Williams and Major Joseph Winston. William Lenoir, who was Cleveland's Lieutenant, was accustomed in after years to recount the hardships and privations the troops had to endure on that service. They were often low of provisions, without tents, with but few blankets, and dressed in clothing mended of crude material derived from the field and forest. Though often harassed on their march by parties in ambush, there was no general engagement, but they all shared in the skirmishes and bushwackings of the campaign. The villages and settlements of the hostile Cherokee were laid waste, their crops and provisions destroyed, and they were compelled to sue for peace.

In the autumm of 1776, Captain Cleveland attended the legislature, not as a member, but to use his influence for the division of Surry County and the formation of a new county for the better convenience of the Upper Yadkin settlements. Wilkes County was formed and named in honor of John Wilkes, noted for his steady opposition in parliament to the American war. In March 1778, when the new county took official form, Cleveland was placed at the head of the Commission of Justices, and was made Colonel of the Militia. Also in 1778 he was chosen to represent Wilkes County in the House of Commons, and was regarded as one of the popular leaders of the mountain section of the state. This was followed by the Battle of King's Mountain and the great service of his life. Before, and during the Revolutionary War period, he was severe in his treatment of the Tories, perhaps not unjustly so, considering the times and circumstances of an exposed frontier when the execution of civil law was so infrequent and uncertain. Colonel Cleveland was not the only Colonel and Commander at the Battle of King's Mountain. There were Colonels Shelby, Sevier, Williams, Campbell, Chronicle, Winston, and McDowell. Cleveland commanded the left flank of the Continental Forces. During this period he was active in sending out scouting parties into the mountainous regions to break up Tory bands still infesting the frontier. By this time his Wilkes riflemen had acquired a reputation of which they were justly proud. They were generally known as Cleveland's Heroes, sometimes as Cleveland's Bulldogs, but the Tories called them Cleveland's Devils.

By the close of the war, Cleveland had lost his Round About plantation to a "better title". Land speculation and "claim jumping" was rampant in that area so anyone who was away for any period of time could expect trouble. He owned considerably more land than was involved in the Round About. At this point he turned his attention to the beautiful region of the Tugaloo on the western border of South Carolina. In 1785 he was granted 1050 acres on the Franklin County, Georgia side of the Tugaloo. He had been attracted to the Tugaloo many years before when he was returning from the Cherokee Nation with his stolen horses. He began selling off his land in Wilkes County, North Carolina. About 1786-87 he moved to his new home in the fork of the Tugaloo River and Chauga Creek, in the present day County of Oconee, South Carolina. He was accompanied by many kinsmen, friends, and old comrades in arms. Colonel Cleveland served many years as a Judge of the Court of Old Pendleton District, along with General Pickens and Colonel Anderson as his associates. Governor Perry wrote that "Ben would often take a snooze on the bench while the lawyers were making long, prosy speeches". If he snored too loudly, his judicial associates would give him a nudge and awaken him. He always administered justice promptly and fairly. For several years before his death he became so unwieldy in size that he could not mount his favorite saddle horse. Colonel Cleveland had two sons and one daughter whose descendants are numerous and respectable, many of them becoming prominent. His wife preceded him to the grave some half dozen years. In the prime of life, Colonel Cleveland was a little short of six feet, finely proportioned, and possessed a pleasing and intelligent countenance.

North Carolina deservedly commemorated the services of this noble hero by naming a county and town after him. With a limited education, but with a vigorous native intelligence, he exerted a commanding influence among a frontier people, and his patriotic activities did much in preserving the western portion of the Carolinas from British and Tory ascendancy.

Although there is no evidence that Benjamin Cleveland actually did any farming himself, he did acquire a considerable amount of land. Records of his grants and deeds have been gleaned from the courts and archives of North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia. The list summarized below may not include all of his land acquisitions:

Wilkes County, NC	Mar 1779	668 acres
	Mar 1780	1242 "
	Oct 1782	1504 "
	Jul 1787	400 acres
Franklin County, GA	Jun 1785	1050 acres
Pendleton Dist, SC	Mar 1789	650 acres
	Dec 1791	1024 "
	Nov 1793	327 "

The records indicate that Benjamin Cleveland sold all of his property in North Carolina. The lands in South Carolina and Georgia, between and on both sides of the Tugaloo River and Chauga Creek, became the Cleveland estate. All of this land passed to Absalom Cleveland, son of Benjamin. From Absalom it passed to his one son and six daughters. Over the intervening years most of this estate was bought in small portions by local residents and newcomers. The most desirable portion of this estate, consisting of some 230 acres, was purchased in 1969 by Paul and Lucy Wilkerson who were still living there in 1987. This land, referred to as the Cleveland Plantation, or Rivoli Farms, juts into the fork of the Tugaloo River and Chauga Creek. The backwaters of the Hartwell Dam now make the joining of the two streams appear as a large lake, rather than the previously deep ravined creek and river. A most beautiful spot where large trees surround a gracious home sited at the highest point overlooking the bodies of water. Mr. Wilkerson is a retired executive of the Allstate Corporation. The grave of Colonel Benjamin Cleveland lies in a stand of trees on the riverside slope just below the house. It has a marker and a wooden fence around it. It is said that Mary, Benjamin's wife, and his son, Absalom, were also buried there.

Colonel Benjamin Cleveland died 15 October 1806. His wife, Mary, passed on in 1800. According to his will, his son John was deceased. His daughter, Jemima, died in 1810. Ben left a vast amount of land on the Tugaloo. His will was signed 10 September 1806, leaving all of his land to Absalom. The estate must have totaled upwards of 3000 acres.

FORT MADISON, SOUTH CAROLINA
July 18, 1887

As a member of the Cleveland family, you are cordially invited to be present at the unveiling of a monument to Colonel Benjamin Cleveland who commanded a regiment of North and South Carolina Troops at the Battle of King's Mountain, 7 October 1780. The monument has been erected at this place where Colonel Cleveland is buried by members of the Cleveland family from South Carolina, Georgia, and Tennessee, and will be unveiled July 28th.

Very Respectfully, The Honorable Vannoy Cleveland

GREENVILLE SC, July 28 (Special)--The monument erected at Fort Madison in honor of Colonel Ben Cleveland, the distinquished soldier of Revolutionary fame, was unveiled today with ceremonies in the presence of a large crowd including many prominent citizens. The ceremonies began with an impressive prayer by the Reverend Ellison Capers, after which he read an ode composed by Miss Mary Cleveland, a descendant.

Letters were read from President Cleveland, Governor Richardson, Ex-President Davis, and other prominent men. The unveiling was performed by six young girls of the Cleveland families. The monument is sixteen feet high and is inscribed as follows: Erected by the members of the Cleveland family in honor of Colonel Benjamin Cleveland, a hero of the American Revolution for independence, and a Commander at the Battle of King's Mountain.
Benjamin Cleveland, 1738-1806

Lieutenant Governor Mauldin made appropriate remarks and introduced the Honorable Rufus Alexander Child of Pickens, the orator of the occasion, who eloquently protrayed the life and character of Colonel Cleveland.

(Authors note: This monument now stands in the weeds alongside Highway 123 between Westminster SC and Toccoa GA, and a scant distance from the bridge which crosses Chauga Creek.)

Mr Christopher Whisenant

has made Hats for him 20 Years spoke of A. Cleveland said he never had had any such dealing with him & ask[d] him who he was this was in July 1837.

Mr Lane

Testifies that he saw the Testator sign the Will in that ~~the~~ Hill Patterson & Miss Hackett sign in the presence of the Testator that Mr Harrison from call[d] in afterwards [had reason to leave any thing to his Children because they had treated him so ill]
Mr Patterson says the Will was regularly signed &c
Mr Cleveland was Qualified by Mr Patterson says he was made any Conveyance of certain property says that a deed of Conveyance was made by him, that he Mr Patterson heard him Mr Cleveland say ~~that~~ some 12 Mos previous that he had made a Deed of Conveyance to Col C. Patrick Let the deed speak for itself Witness' case is Georgia

Mr Harrison Recalled

Mr Benson Testifies he has been long acquainted with M Cleveland has heard him say his wife had left ~~him~~ him did not appear to think she was dead would not speak to some persons not long before his death seem to think his wife was Dead
No important change in his mental faculties that he remark[d]
but never came to the conclusion that he was insane had not drank water for several Years as Cleveland stated himself — Mr Lee Cleveland Recommended him to pay Smith & Choice well for their Trouble but to give his property to his Children he A. Cleveland told Witness he would not do so & expressed himself determin[d] to give his Children nothing & thinks that if he had Changed his mind he would have given them —

Mr Boggs arrested him for shooting Harben his son in law he Cleveland therefore refused conversing with the Sabing does not think that he was at all times Compos Mentis tho at times he appeared ~~otherwise~~ to be so

Mr O Turner
has been long acquainted with M Cleveland Thinks he was not in his proper mind or if so he was very different from other persons did not discover any important Change in his Mental faculties tho he
About 5 or 4 weeks before his Death saw him after Pickens Court ~~October~~ March Term had Tolerable knowledge of farming & common economy they appeared to see squirrels in an old field at times he spoke to Mrs Ballew at other Thomas Hamilton Merchant times he did not notice her tho she spoke 1837.
Has been acquainted with Mr Cleveland since 1829
Judging from his actions he deemed him a fool bargained once with for a pail the only time he ever spoke to writing as well as he recollects Was asked — what influence had Mr Hackett over Cleveland heard Mr Hackett say he had a great influence over him and that he Could do as much as any other man with him did not come

State of South Carolina

Greenville District } On this the twenty eighth day of July in the year 1834 personally appeared in the court of Ordinary for Greenville district before John Watson the Judge of said court Abraham Cleveland a resident of Pendleton District of said State aged seventy five years, who being first duly sworn according to law, doth on his oath ~~say~~ make the following declaration in order to obtain the benefit of the act of Congress passed June 7th 1832.

That he entered the service of the United States under the following named officers and served as herein after stated, he entered the service as a private in Captain Jesse Walton's volunteer company of minute men the last of October in the year 1775 which company was raised in Surry County North Carolina where he then resided, and was to continue as a company for six months for which time he volunteered. The other officers of the company were Benjamin Cleveland first Lieutenant, William Hall 2d Lieutenant and Richard Allen Ensign. Shortly after he entered the service, in October 1775 they marched to Salisbury in N. Carolina where they remained sometime about a month (the precise time not recollected) when the company returned home, after which they kept themselves in a state of readiness to march whenever called on and had frequent musters preparatory thereto until Christmas following, when they marched to Cross Creek now Fayetteville in North Carolina against the Scotch and English forces ~~[illegible]~~ assembled there shortly after the engagement at Moore's Creek bridge in which McDonald the commanding officer of the Scotch & British fell, the company to which he was attached continued in service until sometime in March 1776 making six months of service from the time they volunteered until they return home, [illegible] of that month in actual service from home & the remainder in preparing to obey any legal call that might be made on them -

The company to which he was attached belonged to Major Joseph Winston's Battalion which formed a part of Colonel Martin Armstrong's Regiment -
That he again volunteered for three months and entered the service on the first of March 1777 - in the company commanded by his father Benjamin Cleveland (Walton his former Captain having been promoted to the rank of Major) and they marched to Watauga Fort then in North Carolina now but now Tennessee for the purpose of guarding the frontiers against the attacks of the Indians they continued in service for three months and upwards it being the last of June in the year 1777 when they returned at home - This company was stationed at the Fort during the time and was not immediately attached to any Battalion or Regiment as he knows of - he entitled as a private soldier & so continued during the above detached tour -

That he again volunteered and entered the service as a private soldier in the Company commanded by Captain Richmond Pearson of Rowan County North Carolina the last of June 1780 and first marched to Salisbury, thence to Camden S. Carolina near the mouth of Sandy creek to attack some tories who were there - with whom we had a slight engagement in which we took some prisoners and put the rest to flight - Thence thence we marched to Cheraw hill in S. Carolina where we met with a part of General Gates' army, thence to Big Lynches creek where we had some slight skirmishing with the tories - but have no precise account - thence to Rugeleys Mill where we joined General Gates & his army & continued on march toward Camden until we met the enemy where the battle was fought on the 16th of August 1780 — The company to which he was attached returned to Charlotte after the battle near Camden and thence proceeded to Salisbury he was taken sick at Charlotte and left the service after their arrival in Salisbury and on or about the first of September 1780 being unable to serve out the term for which he had volunteered

I have no documentary evidence of my service and refer to Mr Nathaniel Ramsey whose certificate is hereto annexed as the only living person I know of who can prove my services

I hereby relinquish every claim whatever to a pension or annuity except the present and declare that my name is not on the pension roll of the agency of any state

The applicant in answer to the several interrogatories propounded by the court says to the 1st That I was born on the 24th day of February 1759 in Albemarle County Virginia —

To the 2nd I have no record of my age, it was recorded in a large bible of my fathers, but I do not know where that is —

To the 3d I was living in Surry County North Carolina when I entered the service since the revolutionary war I have lived sometimes in the State of North Carolina, sometimes in the State of Georgia and am now living in Pendleton district South Carolina though of late years I have spent a good deal of my time with my relatives and am at present on a visit to one of my relations in Greenville S. Carolina

To the 4th I always volunteered —

well

To the 5th I have already answered as fully as I can

To the 6th I never received a discharge from the service

To the 7th I refer to Nathaniel Bannon and Samuel Gibson whose certificates are annexed

Sworn to & subscribed the 28th July 1834

Geo Watson Judge C.O.

I Nathaniel Bannon residing at present in the district of Greenville and State of South Carolina do hereby certify that I am well acquainted with Absalom Cleveland who has subscribed and sworn to the foregoing declaration and have been for sixty eight or sixty nine years. That I know of my own knowledge that the first six months of service as a minute man above detailed by him in his declaration was performed as stated, having frequently seen him in the service & was with him part of the time. And I further certify that I am confident the other terms of service as mentioned in the above declaration were performed by him, though I was not with him in the two last mentioned terms yet I knew of his going and being absent from home about the times mentioned & have no doubt of the entire correctness of the whole declaration as I lived in the

in the same neighborhood he did that he is generally reputed and believed to have been a soldier of the revolution a[ll] through this country where his & his fathers Col. Benjamin Clevelands services are matters of history in which opinion I concur —
I believe him to be of the age he states

I Samuel Gibson a clergyman residing in Greenville district South Carolina do hereby certify that I am well acquainted with Absolom Cleveland who has subscribed and sworn to the above declaration that I believe him to be of the age he states viz seventy five years; that he is reputed, and believed in the neighborhood where he resides to have been a soldier of the revolution and that I concur in that opinion

And the said court does hereby declare after the investigation of the matter, and after putting the interrogatories prescribed by the war department that the above named applicant Absolom Cleveland was a revolutionary soldier and served as he states — And the court further certifies that it appears to them that James Jobson who has signed the preceding certificate is a clergyman residing in Greenville District and that Nathaniel Barnes who had signed the first certificate is a resident in Greenville District as creditable persons and that their respective statements are entitled to credit

Amended Declaration of Absalom Cleveland a Soldier of the Revolutionary War made in order to obtain an increase of his pension

The State of South Carolina
Greenville District

On this twenty fourth day of July in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty seven personally came Absalom Cleveland before me the subscribing Justice and being duly sworn made the following declaration on oath, viz, that in the year 1779
the year before last he resided at Camden in this State he was a citizen of county of Fifty some where near Wilkes County in the State of North Carolina which was commanded by Pleasant Henderson of North Carolina as Captain and by this Deponent as first Lieutenant that the whole force in the service hereafter mentioned amounted to near four hundred men and was commanded by Col. Joseph Williams of North Carolina. This deponent further declares that in the said year of 1779 that entered the Service of the United States as first Lieutenant of the company aforesaid for the Term of three months, that he served out the said Term faithfully and was the Commission of first Lieutenant during the whole time and discharged his duties accordingly. The corps to which this deponent was attached during this Term of Service was marched with [illegible]

to run the dividing line between these States that they commenced their duties at the Long Island of Holston and proceeded to the Cumberland Mountain where the corps were discharged and this deponent arrived at home the evening before Christmas in the year 1779- One of the Surveyors from North Carolina was by the name of Guthrie and old Col. Dick Henderson and Samuel Hender:-son acted as Commissioners on the part of North Carolina and Doctor Walker acted as One from Virginia. This deponent further states that he has no papers or writing by which the aforesaid service might be established in his power or possession, and that he is not now aware of the existence of any one by whom he can prove the said service. The year after, 1780, this deponent was at the Battle at Camden where Genl. Gates was defeated- For further particulars he begs leave to refer to his original Declaration upon which he was admitted to the Pension Roll and allowed $26.66 per annum and submits this that his Pension may be increased-

BY W. J. Parsons Ordinary.

of Pickens District.

To Jeremiah Cleveland

WHEREAS Benjamin Cleveland died leaving a Will and as there is no Executor in the State to take charge of said will at this time

by means whereof the power of granting the Administration of the Estate and Effects of the said Benjamin Cleveland to me is manifestly known to belong. And whereas Jeremiah Cleveland hath made suit to me, to grant him Letters of Administration, of the Estate and Effects of the said Benjamin Cleveland with Will Annexed:

I, therefore, in consideration of the premises, and in order that the goods and chattels, rights and credits, of the said deceased, may be well and truly administered, converted and disposed of according to law, do hereby give and grant, unto the said Jeremiah Cleveland (in whose fidelity in this behalf I very much confide) full power and authority by the tenor of these presents, to administer, and faithfully dispose of the goods and chattels, rights and credits of the said Benjamin Cleveland according to the effect and tenor of the said Will. And first, to pay the debts of the said deceased, which he did owe at the time of his death. Afterwards, the Legacies contained in, and specified by the said Will, as far as such goods and chattels, rights and credits, will thereto extend and the law require; being first sworn on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, to make a true and perfect inventory thereof, and to exhibit the same in the Ordinary's Office, in order to be recorded, on or before the first day of January next ensuing. And I do ordain, deputte and constitute you, the said Jeremiah Cleveland Administrator of all and singular, the goods and chattels, rights and credits of the said Benjamin Cleveland deceased, with the Will Annexed.

Given under my hand and seal, this Twenty fifth day day of October in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and fifty seven W. J. Parsons (seal)

January 1^st 1811 Rec^d of Asa Allen Guardian for Mary D Hudson & Virginia Hudson

Modern authorities spell his name "Clark," the style in which he signed it, at least in later life; he is "Clarke" in traditional accounts. As such, he first appears in Heitman's Historical Register as a militia Col., no earlier service being mentioned. Wounded at Alligator Creek, Fla., 30 June '78 (see SOUTHERN THEATER for background), Clarke had his finest hour at KETTLE CREEK, Ga., 14 Feb. '79. After leading his troops in three skirmishes in S.C. in Aug. '80 (GREEN SPRING, Wofford's Iron Works [see under KINGS MTN.], and MUSGROVE'S MILL), being wounded in the last two, Elijah Clarke made his foolish attack on AUGUSTA, Ga., 14–18 Sept. '80. Some authorities (D.N.B., for example) credit him with action at FISHDAM FORD. He was at BLACKSTOCKS, S.C., 20 Nov. '80, and back at AUGUSTA, 22 May–5 June '81.

In recognition of his war services Clarke was granted an estate by the county and state authorities of Ga. He then embarked on a tangled course of dubious adventure. After alternately negotiating with the Indians and fighting them, in 1787 he defeated them in an action at Jack's Creek, Walton co., Ga. In 1793 he entered the French service as a Maj. Gen. with a salary of $10,000 per year and was preparing to support the schemes of French minister Genêt against Spain when Genêt was recalled. The next year he led Ga. volunteers across the Oconee River into Creek territory and was establishing his "Trans-Oconee State" when Pres. Hamilton had Gov. George MATHEWS bring this freebooting to a halt by the use of Ga. troops. Blockaded along the Oconee, deserted by most of his followers, Clarke surrendered. He was later suspected of renewed designs on W. Fla. and was accused of involvement in the Yazoo Land Fraud, but died a popular hero in 1799.

CLARKE, Sir Francis Carr. See next entry.

CLERKE, Sir Francis Carr. 1748–1777. British officer. (Clerke, pronounced Clark.) The seventh baronet, he became an ensign in the 3d Foot Guards on 3 Jan. '70 and was promoted to Lt. and Capt. on 26 July '75. As Burgoyne's A.D.C. he was mortally wounded by Timothy MURPHY at Bemis Heights (see SARATOGA) on 7 Oct. '77 and died that night in the tent of Gen. Gates. James Wilkinson is responsible for the famous story that Gates undertook to convince Clerke of the merits of the American Revolution as the captured officer lay near death from his agonizing wound. Having been unsuccessful, Gates lost his temper and said to Wilkinson as they left the dying officer, "Did you ever hear so impudent a son of a bitch?" Ward comments that Wilkinson's account was written after he had become a bitter enemy of Gates, and that his memoirs are not to be trusted. (W.O.R., 901 n.)

Burke's Peerage makes the double error of stating that Clerke died 15 Oct. '78. His death actually occurred the night of 7–8 Oct. '77. (Ibid.) Tripped up by the English pronunciation of Clerk(e), virtually all American accounts erroneously give this officer's name as Clarke.

CLEVELAND, Benjamin. 1738–1806. Patriot leader. N.C. Born near Bull Run, Va., he moved with relatives to the portion of the N.C. frontier that became Wilkes co. About 21 at this time, uneducated and with a fondness for gambling and horse racing, he developed into a frontiersman in the class with Davy Crockett and Daniel Boone. On 1 Sept. '75 he became Ensign in the 2d N.C. Line. The next summer he was a scout on the western frontier, and that fall he served under Gen. Griffith Rutherford in the CHEROKEE WAR OF 1776. He was promoted to Capt. after this campaign (23 Nov. '76) and saw the country where he was later to settle. In 1777 he served at Carter's Fort and the Long Island of Holston. The next year he retired from the 2d N.C. on 1 June and in Aug. was made Col. of militia; he also became justice of the Wilkes co. court when the county was organized, having been chairman of the Surry co. Comm. of Safety, and in 1778 he was elected to the House of Commons.

In 1780 he turned out to crush the Tories at RAMSEUR'S MILL, 20 June, but apparently was with the force led by his old commander, Gen. Rutherford, and therefore saw no actual fighting. Four months later, however, he led 350 men south to take part in the battle of KINGS MOUNTAIN, 7 Oct. '80. Cleveland is said to have been the man most responsible for the decision to hang nine prisoners after the battle. (D.A.B.)

"Cleveland's Bull Dogs" had a reputation along the Upper Yadkin for brutality and inhumanity as Tory hunters that was unmatched by David FANNING on the other side. As a "justice" he was a fast man with the rope. (Ibid.) In 1781 he was captured by Tories but soon rescued. (Appleton's)

After a title dispute Cleveland lost his plantation, so he moved to what is now Oconee co., the western tip of S.C. He became justice of the region. Gen. Andrew Pickens is among those who have testified that the uneducated, grossly fat patriot hero normally slept through the court proceedings—he became highly annoyed at legal arguments and technicalities. Having reached the incredible weight of 450 pounds (Appleton's), he died at the breakfast table when in his 69th year.

CLINTON, George. 1739–1812. First gov. of the state of N.Y.; Cont'l. general. N.Y. As a subaltern in his father's regiment, and accompanied by his brother James CLINTON, George was with the expedition under John Bradstreet that took Ft. Frontenac on 27 Aug. '57. The next year he served for a short time on a privateer. After studying and practicing law, he sat in the N.Y. provincial assembly in 1768, where he became the rival of Philip Schuyler as a leader of the revolutionary minority. "His ostentatious defense of Alexander McDougall, who posed as the John Wilkes of America, augmented his reputation as a fiery young radical and defender of freedom of speech and of the press," writes Frank Monaghan in D.A.B. In 1775 he was sent to the second Cont'l. Cong. but lost the honor of signing because Washington ordered him to take charge of the defenses of the Hudson Highlands in July '76. After being commissioned B.G. of militia, on 25 Mar. '77 he was appointed B.G. of the Cont'l. Army. The British threat to the Highlands did not develop until Oct. '77, but in his failure to stop Sir Henry CLINTON'S EXPEDITION, George Clinton showed that despite personal courage and vigor he was cut out to be a politician and not a field commander. He himself had no illusions about his military limitations. Meanwhile, on 20 Apr. '77, he had become the first governor of N.Y. under the new state constitution, and although the loss of Forts Clinton and Montgomery (6 Oct.) and his failure to keep the enemy from burning KINGSTON (Esopus), 16 Oct., brought him criticism, he went on to serve six consecutive terms and to win the reputation of "a great war governor." (Ibid.) Fighting in his state was restricted to BORDER WARFARE during the rest of the war, but he was kept busy repelling the Tory-Indian raids from Canada. On 30

Larkin, his brother, had his arm shattered by a ball in battle in 1754, and was a lieutenant in the Second Virginia Regiment. (VI. Va. Hist. Mag. 345.)

CLEVELAND, BENJAMIN. Born and raised in Orange, some six or eight miles from the mouth of Blue Run. He married Mary Graves, also of Orange; was a gallant and efficient officer during the Revolution and one of the commanders at Kings Mountain. (VII. Va. Hist. Mag, 4, 128.)

Wheeler (History of North Carolina) says he was born in Prince William County, Virginia, but the fact of his birth in Orange seems incontestible. Cleveland's Run, about a mile northeast of Barboursville, was doubtless named for him or his family, as his parents and grandparents lived near it. They were Baptists, and doubtless members of old Blue Run church.

CRENSHAW, CAPTAIN WILLIAM G. Born July 7th, 1824, in Richmond, Virginia, and married, May 25th, 1847, Miss Fanny Elizabeth Graves of Orange County. He died May 24th, 1897, at Hawfield, about six months after his wife, and both are buried in Hollywood, at Richmond.

He was a man of remarkable ability. When the Civil War broke out, though not yet thirty-seven years of age, he was the senior member of Crenshaw & Co., whose business extended over a large part of the world, much of their foreign trade being done in vessels built and owned by himself and his brothers.

As soon as Virginia seceded he determined to discontinue business and go into the army, and raised and equipped at his own expense a battery of artillery, known as "Crenshaw's Battery," which became famous. After the ardous campaign of 1863, having participated in every battle from Mechanicsville to Sharpsburg, he was detailed by the Confederate Government to go to Europe as its commercial agent. This position he held to the end of the war, accomplishing large results in obtaining ordnance, clothing, provisions, and other supplies for the government; in building steamers to get these supplies into the blockaded ports; and also building several notable privateers for the Confederacy. He remained in England until the summer of 1868, and was thereafter for many years engaged in business in New York.

Throughout his life he was an ardent, enthusiastic and successful farmer and stock breeder, spending all the time he could spare at Hawfield, where he resided permanently the last ten years of his life.

FRANKLIN, JESSE. Born in Orange, March 4, 1760; died 184–; was adjutant to his uncle, Colonel Cleveland, at the battle of Kings Mountain; member of North Carolina Legislature, and Member of Congress; was United States Senator for two terms and president pro tempore of the Senate, 1805, and Governor of North Carolina in 1820. (VII. Va. Hist. Mag., 128.)

FRY, PHILIP S. Born —; died July 1859; was long the honored and beloved clerk of the county and circuit courts. He was deputy clerk in 1821, a justice in 1834, and was elected clerk in February, 1844, by the full bench of justices, receiving eighteen votes, to one for John M. Chapman.

sought to organize a parish at Lewes, Del., but abandoned the field as unpromising. On July 1, 1757, he was commissioned by the Venerable Society to take charge of the church at New Castle, Del. He proceeded thither, was received with cordiality, and set out for Norwich, Conn., to bring his family. At Philadelphia he became ill and found shelter and care at the home of his friend Benjamin Franklin, who was then absent in Europe. He died in Franklin's house.

CLEVELAND, BENJAMIN (May 26, 1738–Oct. 1806), Revolutionary soldier, was born in Prince William County, Va., the son of John and Martha (Coffee) Cleveland. His parents later moved to Orange County, Va., where Benjamin married Mary Graves and showed great fondness for gambling and horse racing. About 1769 Benjamin, his brother Robert, and his father-in-law moved to North Carolina, settling on Roaring Creek, near the Blue Ridge, where Benjamin began farming, assisted by his father-in-law's servants. Much of his time was spent in hunting and about 1772 he and some equally adventurous friends went to Kentucky on a hunting expedition, but near the Cumberland Gap they were plundered by the Cherokees and ordered off the Indian hunting grounds. With the outbreak of the Revolution he became ensign, and later lieutenant and captain, of the 2nd Regiment of North Carolina militia. Later serving with the county militia in the local warfare of western North Carolina, he commanded "Cleveland's Bull Dogs," called by the Loyalists "Cleveland's Devils." Administering stern justice, his harsh treatment of Loyalists earned for him a reputation for brutality in a partisan warfare characterized by inhumanity, summary hangings, and mutilation. In the summer of 1776 he acted as a scout on the western frontier and served as a captain in Gen. Rutherford's campaign against the Cherokees (Colonial Records of North Carolina, X, 882). He also acted as chairman of the Surry County Committee of Safety and after the organization of Wilkes County he became justice of the county court and was elected to the House of Commons (1778). During the winter campaign of 1778–79 in Georgia he served with Gen. Rutherford but returned home after the defeat of Gen. John Ashe [q.v.], at Briar Creek, was promoted colonel, and was elected to the state Senate. With the invasion of North Carolina by Maj. Patrick Ferguson of the 71st Highlanders in September 1780, Cleveland, with 350 militia, joined Col. William Campbell, Col. Isaac Shelby, Col. John Sevier [qq.v.], and other militia leaders at Quaker Meadows, near the Catawba River. As the officers were of equal rank it was agreed that the command should rest with the board of colonels, and Col. Campbell was elected officer of the day to execute the board's decisions. Ferguson evaded battle and began withdrawing toward Charlotte, hoping to rejoin Lord Cornwallis, but was pursued and defeated in the battle of King's Mountain, Oct. 7, 1780, Cleveland commanding the left flank of the Continental forces. After the battle the army encamped at Bickerstaff's, where Cleveland was conspicuous in securing the execution of a number of captured Loyalists who were accused of being thieves, house-burners, parole-breakers, and assassins. At the close of the Revolution, Cleveland, having lost his plantation, "Round About," on the Yadkin, "by a better title," moved to the Tugaloo region of western South Carolina, where he served for many years as a justice of the Pendleton (now Oconee) county court. As a judge he had great contempt for technicalities and the arguments of lawyers and often slept while on the bench, his colleagues prodding the enormously fat judge whenever his snoring interfered with litigation.

CLEVELAND, CHAUNCEY FITCH (Feb. 16, 1799–June 6, 1887), lawyer, governor, congressman, was born at Hampton, Conn., the son of Silas and Lois (Sharpe) Cleveland. After receiving a common-school education, he studied law with Daniel Frost of Canterbury, Conn., for three years, and in August 1819 was admitted to the Windham County bar. He became clerk of the probate court (1827), probate judge (1829), prosecuting attorney (1833), and state bank commissioner (1837). Between 1826 and 1866 he was twelve times elected to the General Assembly from the town of Hampton and was speaker of the House in 1835, 1836, and 1863. Elected governor of Connecticut in 1842 and 1843, he interested himself in social reform and recommended and carried through an act abolishing imprisonment for debt, a child-labor law, and appropriations for a "Retreat" for the insane poor at Hartford. COL. BENJAMIN CLEVELAND (from Colonial and Revolutionary History of Upper South Carolina) by Dr. J.B.O.Landrum)

The Clevelands, it is said, were an ancient family deriving their name from a tract of country in the north Riding of Yorkshire, England, still called Cleveland. In his history there are two Alexander Clevelands mentioned. The junior of this name was father of John Cleveland, who was the father ofBenjamin, the subject of this sketch.

John Cleveland early migrated to Virginia and married a Miss Martha Coffee. It was here that Benjamin Cleveland was born on the 26th of May, 1738. His early educational advantages appear to have been limited. Much of his early life was spent in hunting. It is said by a writer, that he "like Daniel Boone, had an unconquerable aversion to the tame drudgery of farm life." His favorite resort in early youth was in the wilderness where he secured pelts and furs, which found a ready market. He was also fond of hunting deer by torch light, commonly called fire hunting. In early manhood he married Miss Mary Graves, of Orange County. It is said that he participated in the French and Indian wars, but this is not proven in history, and that his marriage did not tame him. He was fond of horse racing, gaming and other wild sports common on the frontiers. During harvest times the neighbors would be invited. A fiddler and plenty of liquor were provided and the day's work usually ended in a debauch.

To brake away from these habits and associations, Benjamin Cleveland moved with his family to Roaring Creek, in Wilkes County, North Carolina. Here he opened up a farm and devoted much of his attention to stock raising and hunting. In 1772, in company with a party of friends, he set out to Kentucky in quest of Daniel Boone. On the way he and his friends were captured and deprived of their horses, guns, ammunition and shoes. In this pitiful and almost starving condition they returned home. Several months after this Cleveland raised a select party and visited the Cherokee country and recovered the stolen horses. In this he was aided by a friendly chief, Big Bear, who furnished him an escort to visit the several towns and assist in recovering the stolen property.

He early espoused the patriotic cause and on the first of September 1775, was appointed an ensign in the second North Carolina regiment, under the command of Col. Robert Howe. This honor, however, he declined, prefering rather to serve the militia from his own locality.

During 1775 Cleveland's neighbors had occasion to go to Cross Creek to purchase their supplies of iron, sugar and salt, and other necessaries. They were compelled before they could buy or sell to take the oath of allegiance to the King. Cleveland hearing of these acts of tyranny, swore that he would dislodge those Scotch scoundrels at Cross Creek. He raised a select party of riflemen and marching down upon them soon scattered them. He scoured the country, captured several of the outlaws, one of whom he executed. The name of this party was Jackson, who had set fire to the home and store house with merchandise of one Ransom Sunderland.

In the campaign of Colonel Williamson and Rutherford against the Cherokees in 1776 Cleveland as captain of a company in the Surry Regiment served gallantly, sharing all the hardships and privations which the soldiers had to undergo.

In 1777, Captain Cleveland again led his company to the Watauga settlements against the yet troublesome Cherokees, where he served at Carter's Fort until a treaty of peace was concluded in July of that year.

In 1778, the new County of Wilkes, North Carolina, was organized. Cleveland was placed at the head of the commission of justices and was made colonel of the militia. In the fall of this year he was chosen to represent his county in the Legislature of North Carolina. (See Wheeler's History of North Carolina, Wilkes County page 468)

Col. Benjamin Cleveland (Continued)

In 1778, when the British forces invaded Georgia, Colonel Cleveland served in this campaign, his regiment being a part of General Rutherford's command. Returning home from this service he was elected to represent his county in the State Senate.

In the summer of 1780 he was actively engaged in suppressing the Tories at different places; first in marching against the Tories assembled at Ramsour's Mill, arriving there shortly after their defeat; second, in chasing Colonel Bryan's forces from the State, and finally in securing the region of New River, checking the Tory rising in that region. In some instances some of their notorious leaders and outlaws were hanged.

The distinguished services of Colonel Cleveland in the famous King's Mountain campaign have already been noticed. Just before the opening up of the battle of King's Mountain he delivered an address to the troops in plain, unvarnished language which did much to inspire their courage and patriotism on this occasion, and doubtless added greatly to the triumphant success of the American cause.

Draper, in his biography of Cleveland gives an extended account of a narrow escape by him not long after the King's Mountain expedition. It appears that on one occasion he captured two Tory outlaws, Jones and Carl, and hung them. Soon afterward and whilst all alone, he was captured by a gang of Tories. His life hung on a thread. His name and influence was worth everything to the Tories, who decided before they executed him to require him to write passes for them, certifying that each was a good Whig, to be used when in close quarters. Cleveland was a very poor scribe and wrote passes very slowly, believing they would kill him as soon as he finished the work. While he was thus engaged a party of Whigs came up, under the command of his brother, Capt. Robert Cleveland, and he was fortunately recaptured. Riddle who commanded the Tory company which captured Cleveland, was afterward captured with his son and another follower and carried before Cleveland, and by his orders all three of them were hung near the present town of Wilkesboro, North Carolina.

It is said of Cleveland that while in many instances he resorted to the severest measures of punishment against the outrages and maraudings of the Tories he yet exercised a commanding influence over them and caused them to abandon their Tory associations and unite under his standard. Says a writer "Cleveland was literally all things to all people." By his severities "he awed and intimidated not a few, restraining them from lapsing into Tory abominations; by his kindness, forbearance and even tenderness, winning over many to the glorious cause he loved so well."

Cleveland's last military service was in the autumn of 1781. He performed a three months tour of duty on the Little Pee Dee in South Carolina. His command of mountaineers routed the Tory detachment. After this was accomplished he returned home.

At the close of the war Cleveland lost his plantation, called "Round About," by reason of a defective title. His attention had been attracted to a beautiful country in the Cherokee Nacion, while participating in the expedition of Colonels Williamson and Rutherford against the Cherokees in 1776. Though the Indian title was not yet extinguished he resolved to become among the first squatters of that country. He visited the Tugaloo Valley in 1784, and selected for his future home a magnificent body of land lying between the Tugaloo River and Chauga Creek, in the present County of Oconee, S.C. To this place Cleveland removed about the year 1785 or 1786.

To the history of Col. Ben. Cleveland's life after his removal to the Tugaloo much is due to his biography by Governor Perry in his "Sketches of Eminent Statesmen". It was not long after his removal to his new home until his services were called into requisition. When the new "County Court Act," of which Judge Pendleton was the author went into force Col. Benjamin Cleveland, Gen. Andrew Pickens and Gen. Robert Anderson were appointed judges of the court for Pendleton County. Colonel Cleveland was no lawyer, though a good judge of right from wrong. He had a contempt for the technicalities of law and its delays. He was fair in the administration of justice and after hearing the evidence his mind was quickly made up. He did not consult books, but decided according to his sense of justice and right.

It is stated by Governor Perry that Colonel Cleveland grew very corpulent during the latter days of his life, weighing some four or five hundred pounds. It is further stated by this eminent writer, that his (Perry's) father, visited him one bitter cold morning and found him sitting in his piazza with nothing on but a thin calico gown, and that his legs were of a purple color. Mr. Perry said to him. "This is a very cold morning, Colonel Cleveland." "No," replied the colonel. "It is a very fine morning, and I have come out to enjoy the fresh morning air." It is further related by him that by reason of his fleshiness, he would while sitting on the bench take a snooze, while the lawyers rendering their arguments, and would sometimes snore so loud as to interrupt the proceedings of the court.

Governor Perry gives an interesting account of the descendants of Col. Benjamin Cleveland. Two brothers, John and Robert and one sister are named. John Cleveland was a Baptist preacher of good standing, influence and ability. He was a pastor of a church on Chauga River in Oconee County. In referring to the "General History of the Baptist Denomination of America," published in Boston in 1813, a copy of which is in possession of the writer, his name appears as pastor of Chauga Church, Sarepter Association. Membership, 266, founded 1783. The sister referred to, married a Mr. Franklin, brother of Governor Franklin of North Carolina.

Robert Cleveland, brother of Col. Benjamin Cleveland, was a soldier of the Revolution and was a captain in his brother's regiment at King's Mountain. He was the father of Capt. Jeremiah Cleveland, of Greenville, South Carolina, and of Jesse Cleveland one of Spartanburg's early and most successful merchants, who was the father of the late John and Dr. Robert E. Cleveland, the latter the father of the present Dr. Jesse and John B. Cleveland, esq/

The remaind of Colonel Cleveland were buried on his farm which belonged, in 1887, to Dr. William Earle.# [Now, 1962 Rivoli Farms] Governor Perry states that he visited, when a boy, the grave of this immortal hero. It was much neglected brambles, briers and bushes having grown up around it. Some years afterward some one built a square pen around it of pine saplings, which soon rotted down. A few years ago, under the leadership of one of his descendants, Vasey Cleveland, Esq., a handsome monument was placed over the last resting place of Colonel Cleveland by his relatives.

It has been truly said of Colonel Cleveland, that he "was one of nature's great men-great in every respect, great of person, great of heart and great in mind. He was honest, truthful and honorable, and discharged his duties frankly and fearlessly. He was a man of extraordinary judgment, good sense and practical wisdom." Let his name and glory stand among the memories of other heroes that are being perpetuated.

There is a monument to Col. Cleveland at old Madison in Oconee County and a neglected grave in the woods at Rivoli Farms. I have taken photographs of both.

SPECIAL REPORT BENJAMIN CLEVELAND

(CCC NOTE: Colonel Benjamin Cleveland of Revolutionary fame has interested many of us as a friend and relative of 18th century Coffee/ey families. See CCC #12 p. 3, #13 p. 7, #14 p. 3). We quote on page 1 and on this page from REMINISCENCES AND MEMORIES OF NORTH CAROLINA by John H. Wheeler, pps 416-7, SURRY COUNTY

In 1775 this (Surry Co., NC) was a frontier County and was considered to extend with the territorial limits of North Carolina to the Mississipi. Its early inhabitants were the devoted friends of American liberty. In that year(1775) her heroic men formed a Committee of Safety; its journal has been preserved, as also are the names worthy of record. Benjamin Cleveland was the Chairman, William Lenoir was its Secretary, Joseph Winston, Jessie Walton, John. Hamlin, Samuel Freeman, Benjamin Herndon, Charles Lynch, John Armstrong, James Hampton, Richard Goode, George Lash, David Martin, Charles Waddle and others, were its members. Their resolutions breathe a determined resistance to oppression and formed a government simple and effective for the protection of the citizen.

Benjamin Cleveland, the chairman of this committee, was one of the most active and resolute heroes of the Revolution and worthily is his name preserved in one of the most beautiful counties of the state. He devoted himself to the cause of liberty. He was in the Provincial Congress which met at Hillsboro', August 21, 1775 and he was appointed an Ensign in the 2nd.Continental Regiment, raised by the State, commanded by Robert Howe. His name does not appear in the rolls of this regiment, which service was long and active, but we have abundant proof that Col. Cleveland was an active, resolute and useful officer, and a terror to the Tories. On one occasion two men, (Jones and Coil), abandoned and atrocious characters were brought before him. Cleveland, after consulting some of the leading men of the community, hanged them. For this act he was indicted in the Superior Court of the district at Salisbury for murder, but on a petition to the Legislature he was pardoned.

Soon after this event he was taken prisoner by some Tories at the Old Fields on New River, to which place he had gone alone on private business. They took him some distance into a secluded portion of the country, and first required him to give them passes to protect them from the Whigs. He knew when this was accomplished they would kill him. He was some time in writing the passes as he was but an ordinary penman, and he was in no particular hurry. While thus engaged, his brother, Captain Robert Cleveland, with a party of men, knowing the peril of his brother, pursued and fired upon them. They incontinently fled; and so Col. Cleveland's life was saved. Several months after this, one of these same Tories, Riddle his son and another man, were captured and brought before Cleveland. He hanged all three of them at the Mulberry Field Meeting House, where the town of Wilkesboro' now stands. Such resolution and promptness was called for by the daring and desperate conduct of the Tories.

He was, although daring and rash, a most useful officer. He commanded the left wing of the Americans at the battle of King's Mountain, October 7, 1780, and was engaged at the battle of Guilford's Court House.

It is related of Col. Cleveland that he owned a copy of a very remarkable book, entitled, "The Life and Adventures of Mr. Cromwell, the natural son of Oliver Cromwell," written by a man who was the son of a great beauty, named Elizabeth Cleveland, a daughter of an officer of the palace of Hampton Court, who had attracted the attention of the King, Charles I, and who, when Oliver Cromwell assumed the reins of government, won his sympathies; and the author of that book was their offspring. The mother subsequently married a Mr. Bridge and disappeared from notoriety. This book was published after the author's death in 1731_____. To this book, Col. Cleveland attached great store, asserting that through its author he rightfully claimed descent from Oliver Cromwell.

In his work on the Cromwell family, Noble denounces this book as too marvelous to be true,_____the extraordinary adventures recited in the book make it appear to be a fictitious narrative.

Cleveland was ever a source of terror to the Tory; his subsequent career was a terrible ordeal and his adventures most thrilling. But they were incidents of the time. "Cleveland's Heroes" or "Cleveland's Bull Dogs," welcome names to the patriots, became "Cleveland's Devils" to the Tories.*

pensioned in Tennessee. It is not known to revisor whether either man was at King's Mountain.

Chisholm. John, a settler on the Nollichucky, was under Sevier and was a lifelong friend of that colonel, serving in several campaigns. He was prominent in the State of Frankland, and was mixed up in the impeachment of Governor Blount. He was one of the early justices of Washington, and kept the first tavern in Knoxville. He died in London, England.

Chittim. John, a soldier under Captain Samuel Martin, was badly wounded but lived to an old age. He was pensioned in Lincoln county, North Carolina, 1815.

Christian. Gilbert, a son of Robert and nephew of Colonel William, was a major under Colonel Campbell. He was active in the border wars, was a lifelong friend of Colonel Sevier, and died in Knoxville in 1793.

George, son of Gilbert, was with his father in the Indian wars. In a letter to Draper he speaks of the battle of Long Island.

"Father commanded a company at Long Island. Under him was George Rutledge and Robert King, both with him at King's Mountain. They rendezvoused at Patterson Mill. . . . There was no Patten Mill at this time (1779-80) as Haywood has it. There were only two mills in that section of the country. Patterson's Mill was situated eight miles below Long Island near the Holston River, near or rather on a small creek, and Rice Mill was three miles still lower down on a creek that went into the Holston."

The letter in Chapter V, by George Christian to Dr. Draper, will illuminate Gilbert Christian's services.

Clark. Elijah was the colonel who worried Ferguson on his way to take a stand on King's Mountain. He was not himself in the battle, but many of his men were.

George was from Washington county, Virginia and was under Campbell.

James* and Michael* were pensioned in Lincoln county, North Carolina, but their applications do not state whether they were in the battle.

John, a captain from Georgia, received a sword cut in the neck in the skirmish at the Wofford Ironworks, but recovered in time to go to King's Mountain. He was pensioned in Washington county, Tennessee.

William, a soldier under Marion, was with Sevier at King's Mountain. His record is in Lineage Book 2, D. A. R.

Cleveland. Benjamin was born in Prince William county, Virginia in 1738. While still very young he married Mary Graves of a wealthy and influential family. With others he made a trip to Kentucky to see the country and to hunt. The mountain tories raising the British flag in 1776, Cleveland vanquished them with his company of volunteers. He served throughout the Revolution and is considered one of the ablest colonels, wherever he was placed. At King's Mountain he commanded the men from Surry and Wilkes. Draper, Wheeler, and others give much space to his able services.

Larkin was a brother to Benjamin, and while on his way to King's Mountain encountered a party of tories at Loveday Shoals and was wounded.

Robert, another brother, was a captain of infantry at King's Mountain. He died in Wilkes county in 1812.

John, a son of Colonel Cleveland, was born in Virginia in 1760. He entered the service as a private, but was a lieutenant under Shelby in the attack on Augusta in 1780. He led a company at King's Mountain, and was in the fight at the Raft Swamp in 1781. He died on the Tugalo in 1810. His son Benjamin was a prominent citizen of Habersham county, Georgia.

Ezekiel was in the engagements at Kettle Creek, Wofford's Iron Works, Musgrove's mill, Fishdam Ford,, Lone Cane Creek, and King's Mountain. For his service at Augusta in 1780 he had a grant of land from Georgia. His wife was Elizabeth Harman. Their daughter Nancy married William Henry Hardin, son of a soldier of the Revolution. Descendants are in Georgia.

Clon. William is listed by Draper as in Shelby's command.

Cloud. Joseph was a captain under Cleveland. Carruther speaks of him in his "Sketches of North Carolina."

Clowney. Samuel left Ireland with one companion and settled on the Catawba. He was in many battles of the Revolution, and is thought to have been under Colonel Brandon at King's Mountain. After the war he married and settled in Union district, South Carolina, where he died September 27, 1824, aged eighty-one. Both Draper and the Habersham Collections give much

A LIFE SKETCH OF COLONEL BENJAMIN CLEVELAND

by

Marshall W. Williams
Madison, Georgia

PREFACE

Benjamin Cleveland, a hero of King's Mountain, lies buried in Oconee County, on a knoll overlooking the flooded Tugaloo River, now the backwaters of the Hartwell Lake. Almost everyone in Oconee County has heard of him, but only a few know of his life. It is a purpose of this little work to offer something concrete about Cleveland's life, and to present him as he was: heroic and dictatorial, yet a man who firmly believed in justice and duty.

Much of the material contained in this sketch has been summarized from the manuscript collection of Lyman C. Draper, who was, in the last century, a Secretary of the Wisconsin Historical Society, and was very diligent in collecting historical material, much of which he used in his volume King's Mountain and Its Heroes. In this volume he gave a brief sketch of Cleveland's life, but his main interest here was concerned with Cleveland's role in the Battle of King's Mountain. Much of the material he collected was not used in the book. The University of Wisconsin has recorded on microfilm all of his materials, and this collection forms an extremely important source of material concerning Cleveland. In this collection are letters, affidavits, and sketches by Cleveland's descendents and co-lateral relatives. Many of these letters date from the 1840s, and constitute the nearest approach I have yet found to a primary source concerning Cleveland. Colonel R.T. Jaynes, in his book Thomas Jefferson Rusk has included much information regarding Cleveland's life. Parts of the genealogy in this book, however, do not agree with the more primary information given in Draper's works. The genealogy included here is primarily from Draper, with some of Jaynes' observations added.

PRE-REVOLUTIONARY YEARS

Benjamin Cleveland's grandfather, Alexander Cleveland, moved to Virginia about 1690, from Yorkshire, England. There was a strong family tradition that this Alexander Cleveland was a close relative of Oliver Cromwell, but there is only conjecture - no proof. Alexander's son, John, married Martha Coffee, a daughter of William Coffee, and from this marriage came sons who fought in the Revolution, a "hero of King's Mountain", a pioneer Baptist preacher, and a daughter who became the mother of a North Carolina governor.

Benjamin Cleveland was born May 26 (some records say April 26), 1738, in Orange County, Virginia. He had four brothers and three sisters, Benjamin being the oldest of the lot. (See genealogy at conclusion of this sketch). His brother, John, is sometimes mentioned as being the oldest, and it is certain that his age was very near that of Benjamin. The Cleveland boys grew up to be a rather reckless lot, for there is a letter by H.M. Stokes, written in 1843, which describes the brothers in general, and Benjamin in particular, as being very immoral. These brothers spent much of their time at the race track, almost always losing their money in gambling. It seems that while at the tracks, they inevitably got into fights. At cards, Benjamin would often accuse his opponent of cheating, knock the man down down, sweep the pot into his pocket, and walk off - and no one dared to follow him. When he was about twenty three years of age he married Mary Graves, daughter of William Graves. While Ben's rough and tumble character was smoothed somewhat by the gentle hands of a woman, he always remained brusque and decisive in action. One of his neighbors even accused him of being dictatorial.

The very appearance of Benjamin Cleveland, in the memory of one writer, was that he had a very martial bearing, being over six feet tall. His weight was tremendous, even as early as the Battle of King's Mountain, at which time it is reported that he weighed 300 pounds! Cleveland's education was very limited, but included "reading, writing, and arithmetic to the rule of three". His mind is described as being excellent.

After his marriage, he settled upon his father-in-law's farm, for in his squanderous ways, he had acquired no property. On this farm was born his only children - two sons, which were named John and Absolom. In due course of time, about 1769, Ben, his wife Mary, and their two children moved to the western frontier of North Carolina. Also making this move was his father-in-law's family, and with the help of his in-law's slaves, he began making a plantation for himself, naming it Roundabout, for it was situated in a loop of the Yadkin River, which ran "roundabout" his place.

In his early years he had acquired an aversion to work, and particularly toward the drudgery of farm life, and thus he had turned his energies to hunting. In his new home, he continued to prowl the forest in search of game, obtaining great quantities of furs and pelts, which he took to Salisbury and to Salem to sell. With a life like this it was inevitable that he should meet Daniel Boone, who told him of the great "promised land " in Kentucky, and the great rewards of the long hunt. Fired with the imagination of a hunter's paradise, Cleveland started out in 1770 with companions Jesse Walton, Edward Wryce, Lewis Bond, and William Hightower. They set out early in the hunting season, in all likelihood bound for Kentucky, and travelled some hundred to hundred and fifty miles before stopping to take furs and pelts. Accounts vary as to where this camp was set up. One story says it was on the Nolichucky River in eastern Tennessee; another says it was on the Little Tennessee River in Southwestern North Carolina. At any rate, it was not in Kentucky. At this camp they were visited by Indians, who seemed friendly enough, and with whom they smoked the inevitable pipe.

One morning, after they had collected a goodly amount of furs, they were visited by a band of Indians who were very hostile toward them, and who would neither smoke nor eat with the hunters. The leader of this band told them that all the furs and pelts they had taken from the forest belonged to the Indian, whereupon the group of hostiles took all their skins, horses, rifles, but leaving them one old shotgun and a few charges of powder and shot. Cleveland and his companions were then warned to get out of the country at once. Having no choice, the hunters began the long trek homeward, followed oy Walton's dog Toler. One fortunate shot from the old gun killed a deer, and they feasted on this for awhile, but then again came the pangs of hunger. For many days they subsisted on berrys and joints of cane. At length, however, they decided to kill and eat the dog Toler, which they did, saving parts of it for their journey. Eventually they reached the settlements, nearly starved, having nothing to show for their hunt, and having lost guns and horses.

The following spring, in the year 1771, Cleveland set out again for the place where the Indians had robbed them, and with the help of Big Bear, an old Cherokee headman, he succeeded in recovering the horses which the gang of plundering Indians had taken. One old manuscript says that Cleveland did not return directly home after getting his horses back, but that he set out to the southeast, penetrating into the valley of the Tugaloo River before turning homeward again. If this be true, then this was his first glimpse of the valley which was to be, in later years, his home.

As far as the evidence is available, Cleveland did not get into Kentucky on this particular long hunt, and no others are documented. However, it seems unlikely that Cleveland would have stayed out of Kentucky on account of a few pillaging Cherokees, and it is quite possible that in the years 1772 or 1773 he did go into Kentucky. There is no record that he ever went on a long hunt with Daniel Boone.

THE YEARS OF WAR

The troubles with the British were mounting in the early 1770s, and by 1774 Benjamin Cleveland was very much vocal in his denunciation of British policies regarding the Colonies. In 1775 he was appointed Ensign of a militia company, and by 1776 was a captain. Shortly after the outbreak of the fighting, Cleveland took his men to Sycamore Shoals, on the Watauga River, from where they ranged the frontier, in order to put on a show of force for the Cherokee Indians, who were being agitated by British agents. This sudden movement of Cleveland's caused the Indians to have second thoughts about their urgings by the British, and they smoked the long pipe of peace. This accomplished, Cleveland's men returned to their homes. In July of 1776, however, the Cherokees arose again, and began to ravage the frontier. The North Carolina Assembly ordered General Griffeth Rutherford, with 2000 men, out against the warring Indians. Cleveland at once raised a large volunteer company and joined him. One of his Lieutenants on this foray was William Lenoir, who was to fight with him at King's Mountain four years hence.

In South Carolina, General Andrew Williamson was pushing toward the Indian Country with like force. Though the actions of these two armies were not coordinated, they succeeded in the complete devastation of practically all Cherokee towns and crops, from Sugartown in the Lower Towns, to Chota in the Overhills Towns, in what is now Tennessee. It was during this campaign of Williamson in South Carolina that the famous ring fight took place, at the Cherokee town of Tomassee, on August 12, 1776. Cleveland's excursions must have taken him as far down as the Tugaloo valley during all this fighting, for in his later years he said that he had whipped the Indian at the place where he was determine to live.

In the end, of course, the Cherokee was defeated, and at the Long Island Treaty of the Holston, and at the Treaty of Dewitt's Corners in South Carolina, he paid for his listening to the English wooing. As a victor in the campaign, Cleveland returned home and was elected to the general assembly of North Carolina.

In 1779, an indication of the abrupt type of justice meted out by Cleveland is shown in his handling of two hoodlums by the name of James Coyle and John Brown. These two men had terrorized the entire country between Cleveland's home county of Wilkes, in North Carolina, and Ninety-Six, in South Carolina. Murder, rape, robbery, and plundering was attributed to them. They were at last caught and brought before Cleveland. Cleveland was so incensed that he determined to kill them himself, and drawing his sword he thrust it at Coyle. A glancing blow broke the blade, not doing any damage to Coyle. Cleveland thereupon had them seized by his men and hung from the nearest tree.

James Harwell, who had housed and protected these two hoodlums, was severely beaten by Cleveland's men. Cleveland, as well as Benjamin Herndon, who was also involved in this summary justice, got into some difficulties with the law about this hanging, for the North Carolina House, on November 6, 1779, offered a resolution to the governor that Cleveland and Herndon be pardoned for their actions in the matter. Cleveland at this time was a member of the House of Assembly.

In June of 1780 Benjamin Cleveland's brother Larkin, while on a tory hunt, was ambushed from a high, rocky cliff. The attacker escaped, and Larkin was crippled for the rest of his life. It was this wound which caused him to miss the action at the Battle of King's Mountain.

About this time, Benjamin Cleveland was appointed Justice of the Peace of Wilkes County, North Carolina, and received a commission as a major. The exact order of these events is uncertain, but all occurred in this general time period. After a punitive expedition into eastern North Carolina against a gang of Scotch tories, he was appointed Colonel of militia, his highest rank. Cleveland became very troublesome to the tories, hounding them and hanging many. His men became known as Cleveland's Devils, and for good reasons. When a "tory hunt" was in the making, Cleveland would send word to his men, who were for the most part farmers, and they would drop their work where it was and assemble at "Roundabput". They would then range the frontier and countryside for upwards of 200 miles, taking Tory gatherings by surprise and by storm.

In the fall of 1780 Benjamin Cleveland learned of the British Colonel ~~Partack~~ Patrick Ferguson's intended march into North Carolina. With Colonel Isaac Shelby and Colonel Arthur Campbell, the men were assembled - some (2000) of them - at Burke's Court House, in North Carolina. Captain Jesse Franklin (Cleveland's nephew, and later governor of North Carolina) was appointed adjutant, and Major Micajah Lewis was appointed quartermaster. The army then struck out in search of Ferguson.

The Battle of King's Mountain is well documented, and its details will not be covered here. It is desirable to note, however, that Benjamin Cleveland was one of the principal officers in that conflict. Since most of the army was afoot, it was determined to take about 700 mounted men and thus speed up the search for Ferguson and his men who were, of course, now atop King's Mountain, in what Ferguson firmly believed to be an impregnable position. As the Whig horsemen approached the mountain, they each sought out pre-assigned positions. As Benjamin Cleveland sought out his post, which was at the eastern end of the mountain, his horse, Roebuck, was shot out from under him. He snatched his flintlock pistols from his saddle and ran afoot to his post - in spite of the fact that even at this time, twenty-six years before his death, he weighed 300 pounds!

King's Mountain was the turning point of the American Revolution in the south, and Cleveland was ever after known and honored for his part in it. At the end of the battle, he had Ferguson's horse in place of his own Roebuck, and kept it as his own. Cleveland and his men, after King's Mountain, dogged Cornwallis in his circuit through North Carolina, cutting off his foraging parties, and in general making life miserable for them, until finally Cornwallis was met by the Americans at Guilford Court House. There is some evidence that Cleveland and his men were in this battle, too, though such evidence is very sparse.

Upon Cleveland's return to his home, and to his seat in the General Assembly, he was in February of 1781 presented witha resolution of thanks by that body, and was presented with "an elegant mounted sword," as was also other commanders at King's Mountain. In this resolution it was stated that Cleveland was in readiness to leave the Assembly again in defense of his country.

Sometime in 1781 Cleveland was captured by a gang of Tories. There are numerous accounts of how his capture came about. One of the more likely accounts says that he was visiting in Ashe County with his friends Richard and John Calloway, and that his presence was betrayed by a local Tory named Joseph Perkins. The records state that this Perkins family lived with this stigma upon it for a great many years afterward. It seems that Perkins sent word to a Tory leader named Riddle, whose men then silently surrounded the Calloway house, and then burst in upon the occupants. In a blast of gunfire Richard Calloway was shot in the leg. John Calloway dived out of a window, making good his escape into the forest. Cleveland fully expected to be executed on the spot. Instead, Riddle took him prisoner, carrying him away from the house and into the forest wilderness. In the meantime, John Calloway headed for a church meeting which he knew to be in progress, about seven miles down the road from his house. From here, the word was spread, and very soon Cleveland's brother Robert learned of Benjamin's capture. Robert secured the services of a small number men, probably between six and nine men.

The next morning Robert Cleveland and his men came upon Riddle and his gang. Benjamin Cleveland was sitting on a log, a pencil in his hand, writing on bits of paper. Some accounts say that a Tory held a cocked pistol at his head. As Cleveland later told it, he was being made to write passes, with which Tories could circulate freely in Whig country. Knowing that his men would be after him, Cleveland made deliberate numerous errors in his writing, erasing, re-writing, and erasing, trying to gain the time he knew he would need for his rescuers to catch up. He was convinced that as soon as he completed this chore that he would be killed, for he had never shown one iota of mercy to any Tory whom he had captured. It seems probable that in view of Cleveland's limited education that at least some of his errors were not deliberate.

With much shouting, Robert Cleveland's men began the rescue, firing into Riddle's small group. At once, Benjamin Cleveland rolled off his log, trying to hide his three hundred pounds behind it - probably without too much success. Some of Riddle's men escaped, but Riddle himself and two others were captured and taken to Mulberry ~~Store~~ Field MEETING House - later known as Wilkesboro - and hung, all to the same limb of a large oak tree. The place where Riddle was captured, part of the mountain range in northern (NORTHERN) North Carolina, afterwards became known as Riddle's Knob.

One episode during the Revolution gives an insight into Benjamin Cleveland's wife's loyalty to him, and to his cause. Cleveland at this time was away from home, possibly on his way to King's Mountain. Some Whig scouts brought to Roundabout four Tories, and asked Mary Cleveland what they should do with them. She replied that they should do just what Benjamin would do if the were there. They asked her what that might be, and she replied "go and hang them to the gate post". And so they were hung. One family tradition has it that it was the son John who was asked this question, but more sources seem to indicate that it was Mary Cleveland who gave the "hanging" opinion.

THE POST WAR YEARS

After the war, Cleveland returned to his Yadkin River home, staying there for three or four years. As with Daniel Boone, Cleveland's land titles became involved in counterclaims, and his thoughts turned to the beautiful Tugaloo valley to the south. About 1785 he therefore moved his family to this valley, the area being opened for settlement in that year. Here he established his home at the juncture of the Chauga and Tugaloo Rivers, having some land surrounding it granted to him for his Revolutionary services, and buying still more land from other grantees. On this farm where he settled lay the site of the Cherokee town of Chauga, a large mound in the bottom testifying to their one-time presence. When this Indian site was excavated by the University of Georgia some years ago, Carbon 14 dating showed that it had been occupied at least as early as 700 A.D., and that it was continuously occupied for hundreds of years, thus giving this river junction an almost continuous occupation by either the Indian or the white man for roughly 1,200 years.

Cleveland in due time was appointed as one of the District judges, along with General Andrew Pickens and Colonel Robert Anderson. It is told that the unfortunate horse thief who was luckless enough to be brought before Cleveland was meted out the same justice which many a Tory obtained before him, usually the rope. Even the Indians, who still inhabited adjacent areas, felt the displeasure of Cleveland. On one occasion a small band of Indians made the mistake of stealing some of Cleveland's horses. Bearding the lion in his den, Cleveland went to the headmen of the Indian village and demanded the immediate return of his animals. He got them back forthwith.

Both of Benjamin Cleveland's sons moved to the Tugaloo valley with him. His elder son Absolom, in later years, became mentally disturbed. One report says that it happened when his wife died. One of his eccentricities was that he would drink no water, and another, according to other sources, was that he would not talk. Before his death, however, he had in large measure recovered his faculties, and found that some of his son-in laws had squandered his property, and he sued for the return of it. After his death his will was contested in court, but his estate retained a young man by the name of Benjamin F. Perry to defend it in court, and the will was sustained. Perry later became the Provisional Governor of South Carolina, after the War Between the States, and was a native of what is now Oconee County, having been reared a few miles below Cleveland's place, on the Tugaloo River. Absolom Cleveland was buried beside his father, this fact being attested to by an old colored man by the name of Frank Smith, who dug Absolom's grave.

John, Colonel Bejamin Cleveland's other son, was known to all as "Devil John", because of his rough ways. On one occasion, when his wife Catherine, had joined the church, John asked her if she had been baptized. She said yes, she had. John, who had discouraged her church affiliation, then carried her to the river, saying she would have enough of baptizing, and proceeded to immerse her ninety-nine times into the cold waters of the Tugaloo. This, along with other such events, caused Catherine enventually to leave him, returning to her family in North Carolina, where she stayed until her death. John's death, about 1810, was caused when he got into a fight with a man named Bond, and was thrown onto a stump of a tree, breaking his back.

In all this, it must be remembered that these men, with their rough ways, helped to forge a nation out of the furnace of King's Mountain.

Though Benjamin Cleveland had always been large, his last years were extremely uncomfortable for him because of his obesity. About ten years before his death he was operated on, and a quantity of fat was physically removed from his body. His family said it only seemed to make him fatter. His weight has been variously given, but about 500 pounds seems a good estimate. His arms would not meet across his body, and he became an object of curiosity to strangers who happened to meet him. In his final few years, his clothing consisted of a loose garment: a light gown in the summer, and a heavier cloak in the winter. A special chair was built for him, mounted on rollers. In this chair he would sit on his porch and supervise his farm. It was his bed at night, and it said that for nine years prior to his death, to the day of his death, he did not lie down, but slept in this chair. It became his death bed, for in it, sometime in late September or early October, in the year 1806, he died.

Benjamin Cleveland was buried on his farm, on a knoll overlooking the Tugaloo River. For many years only a rude unlettered stone marked his grave, and when Absolom his son, was buried beside him, and others of his family followed, there was nothing to distinguish the graves. In the course of time, his grave was lost among the pines ~~which~~ grew in this family cemetery. Eventually, however, a marker was placed at the supposed site of his grave. Colonel Robert A, Thompson, writing in 1874, said that Cleveland's dwelling house and all the outhouses had disappeared, and that even the brick lining of his house cellar had been removed.

On July 27, 1887, a large monument was unveiled at Fort Madison, being dedicated to the memory of Benjamin Cleveland. Some have expressed the opinion that this marks Cleveland's grave, but it doesn't, of course.

Though South Carolina has not honored Benjamin Cleveland with a county named for him, North Carolina, where he lived during his Revolutionary service, has done so, establishing Cleveland County IN 1841. To Colonel Benjamin Cleveland, and to others of his caliber, we owe a debt of honor for their part in the founding of this country. Most of these men were poorly educated, many completely illiterate; their living came from the earth, and they supplied most of their own necessities. Yet, as with Cleveland, they forged a nation. Here is a lesson we should not soon forget.

". . . if being active keeps you alive I'll live until I'm 110"

Foothills' friendliness drawing card for retirees

SEPT 24, 1978

By PATRICIA TEMPLETON
News staff writer

It may not be Miami or St. Petersburg, Fla., but the Foothills region of South Carolina is rapidly gaining in popularity as a retirement area.

The lakes, the mountains, the low taxes, the clean air, and the friendliness of the people are all reasons why retirees are moving to this area from all over the country.

Friends of Merle and Winnie Jones were "shocked" when the couple decided seven years ago to retire to Seneca from Binghamton, N.Y.

Jones said it was really an accident that brought them to Seneca.

"We had been to Florida and decided to come back by way of Atlanta. The next day we traveled as far as Greenville. We liked what we saw, and decided to take another look," Jones said.

The Joneses returned to Greenville the next fall, but decided it was too big and crowded for their tastes. However, while in Greenville they went to a Tricentennial exhibit that showed a film featuring Seneca and Oconee County.

"After it was over, we looked at each other and said, 'Gee, maybe this is the answer to our dreams,'" Jones said.

They looked at Seneca, went to visit Hendersonville, N.C., and then decided to retire to Seneca.

And, they say they have not regretted their decision. "The beauty of the whole area, the climate, the change of seasons, the mountains, the nearness to Clemson...we've been very happy," Mrs. Jones said. Other retirees' moves to the area have not been by accident.

As a former insurance executive, Paul Wilkerson says he knows what makes a successful retirement.

Wilkerson attended seminars on retirement when he was vice president of Allstate Insurance, and he and his wife, Lucy, searched all over the country looking for a place to retire.

They chose a farm seven miles out of Westminster.

Both the Wilkersons are originally from Gaffney, but they lived in Jackson, Miss., Denver, Houston, Pennsylvania, Delaware, and Atlanta before coming back to South Carolina to retire.

They bought the Cleveland Plantation, former home of Revolutionary War hero Col. Benjamin Cleveland, in 1969, and visited it on the weekends until Wilkerson retired from Allstate in January 1976.

Now, Wilkerson jokingly says he is considering retiring again. "A lot of times I just don't have time to play golf like I'd like to," he said.

"Insurance people know if you retire after working all your life and do nothing, you die pretty fast. If being active and working keeps you alive I'll live until I'm 110," he added.

Wilkerson seems to be involved in enough activities to keep him alive until he is 110.

He has taken up the hobbies of raising Angus cattle and Arabian horses on the 230-acre farm. He is also a member of the Oconee County Planning Commission, president of the Westminster Rotary Club, and an active member of the Toccoa First Baptist Church.

The Wilkersons also keep a condominium in Atlanta, and take yearly hunting and fishing trips.

The Wilkersons have been pleased with their decision to retire to South Carolina.

"The people are so friendly here. People think these rural mountain people are clannish, but they are easy to get along with," Mrs. Wilkerson said.

The taxes are another attractive feature about the Westminster area. Wilkerson said he pays less taxes on his farm than he does on his condominium in Atlanta.

Not all retired couples in Oconee County are as active as the Wilkersons. Jimmy and Mitzi Armstrong, who moved to Westminster a year ago from West Palm Beach, Fla., enjoy the relaxing atmosphere of the area.

"I was asked to join the women's club, but I just didn't want to. For years I've been active in the PTA, the garden club, women's clubs...I just want to retire from all that. We want to see other people work besides us," Mrs. Armstrong said.

The Armstrongs, who moved here to be close to their daughter who also lives in Westminster, originally had planned to spend the winters in Florida, but after they moved here decided to stay year round.

After 40 years of Florida sunshine and beaches they are happy to be near the quiet of the mountains.

"We've had people visit us and look out our window and say, 'I get the feeling I'm not in Florida,'" Mrs. Armstrong said.

Perhaps the strongest proof the Foothills region of South Carolina is becoming increasingly attractive to retirees is in Clemson.

Two years ago, 25 retirees in the Clemson area got together and planned a retirement community.

Now construction has begun on the Clemson Area Retirement Center, a 37-acre complex including 185 rental apartments, a health care center, a clubhouse, dining room, and library, which should be completed by early 1980.

The complex will be surrounded by a 43 acres where retired couples may build their own homes or townhouses.

Walter Dixon, president of the retirement center corporation, said 225 shares of stock, sold at $5,000 each, have been bought in the corporation, and he expects an additional 200 shares to be sold.

Dixon, who retired to Clemson from New York City eight years ago, said the area is ideal for retirees, with its closeness to lakes, mountains, and golf courses, plus the advantages of a university town.

"We know we're living out the last years of our lives, and we might as well enjoy them. They can be fruitful and friendly years," Dixon said.

"We don't want people moving in who are waiting to die. We want people who want to enjoy living. One lady said she wanted to be able to be sure she could open her front door and whistle and get three for bridge."

FREEDOM HERO LIES IN UNKEPT GRAVE

By ETHEL VAUGHAN
Independent Staff Writer

WALHALLA — Col. Ben Cleveland, famed in hunting, the French and Indian War, the Revolution, and friend of Daniel Boone, lies in a neglected, practically forgotten grave in Oconee County.

BUT A monument stands proud in his memory near Tugaloo River between Westminster and Toccoa, Ga.

Cleveland's grave is covered by a granite slab, around which has grown briars and bramble. Many members of the present generation obviously have forgotten men like Col. Cleveland who fought for the life and liberties we have today.

Oconee County Historical Society has done great work in perpetuating the memory of our great leaders. Work being done in and around the Cleveland monument is only one of the many the Society hopes to complete.

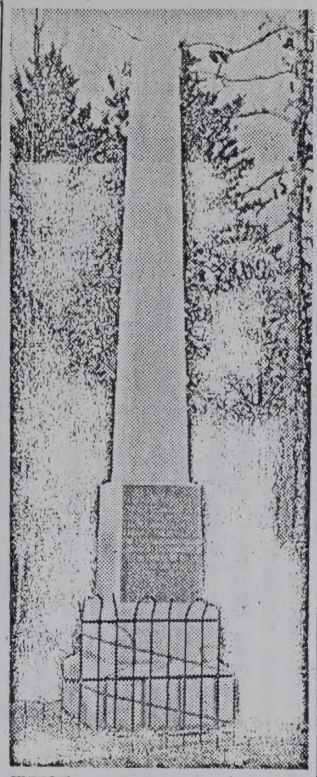
As far as is known, Mrs. R. G. Carter of Walhalla is the only person alive who attended the unveiling of Col. Ben Cleveland's monument July 28, 1887.

COL. CLEVELAND was descended from an ancient family in the North Riding of Yorkshire, England. His father and grandfather migrated from England to America and settled on the area now known as the famous Bull Run in Virginia, where on May 26, 1738, Ben Was born.

As a youth, Cleveland liked to hunt. He was noted for his quickness of thought and rapidity of action in times of emergency and danger. In early manhood, he married Mary Graves of Culpepper County, Va.

After service in the French and Indian wars, he later moved with his family to Wilkes County, N. C. He was a great friend of Daniel Boone's, who told him of the rich Kentucky country, which abounded in all kinds of game.

Cleveland started with four companions on an extensive hunt beyond the mountains, crossing the Cumberland Gap, where they encountered Indians. He returned home via Tugaloo Valley, probably near where the handsome granite monument now stands.



THIS monument honoring Col. Ben Cleveland remains in good condition near Tugaloo River on Highway 123 between Westminster and Toccoa. But the Revolutionary War hero's grave lies neglected, virtually forgotten in a field about a mile away. (Independent Photo by Ethel Vaughan, Seneca).

ONE ACCOUNT said Cleveland and his men could not cross the Tugaloo, as they pursued the Indians and Tory outlaws, that all were killed and that one single grave at the fork of the Tugalo and Chauga held the remains of the Indians and Tories.

Whatever the reason, it is known that Cleveland was deeply impressed with the beauty of what is now known as Oconee County, enough to return here and make his home and to be buried here.

He became such a terror to the British that 100 guineas were offered for his head.

WHEN THE peaceful valley of the Yadkin was disturbed by contending forces and factions, and the report of resounding arms was heard from the height of Lexington and Bunker Hill, Cleveland was among the first to enlist.

Of all his services, maybe the most important — result-wise — was at the Battle of Kings Mountain. Defeat of the British and Tories at Kings Mountain was so overwhelming and crushing that it destroyed the supremacy of the Loyalists in all of South Carolina's interior, excepting Ninety Six. The Battle of Kings Mountain is called the Battle of the Colonels. Eight men with such ranks took part.

Following the Revolution, the state of Georgia granted Col. Cleveland a tract of some 3,000 acres of land in the Tugaloo and Chauga Valley on both sides of the Tugaloo and Chauga Rivers. At that time Georgia claimed Keowee and Seneca Rivers to be the line between the two states. In 1784, Col. Cleveland settled in the Tugaloo valley and lived there for 22 years until his death in 1806. He gave distinguished service in both war and peace.

HE WAS called to the bench along with Generals Andrew Pickens and Robert Anderson, and served for many years as Judge of Old Pendleton District. As an upright judge he administered justice with promptness and fairness. His strong natural endowments, firmly balanced mind and vigorous brain raised him to distinction and fame. He would have been a conspicious figure any where and in any age for he was said to have weighed between four and five hundred pounds. Although a judge, he was no lawyer he had great contempt for the technicalities of the law and all its delays.

His desire was to administer justice promptly and fairly; after hearing the evidence in the case, his clear mind and good sense came quickly to a conclusion, and he did not care to hear argument. He would often drop off to sleep while the lawyers were arguing their cases, and snored so loudly, he had to be awakened.

MEMBERS who wish to join the Historical Society may do so by paying $1. Dues may be paid to John Duncan, treasurer at Walhalla.

COLONEL BENJAMIN CLEVELAND.

There is an instinct of human nature which prompts us to commemorate the virtues and heroic achievements of the illustrious dead. We delight to honor the memory and sketch the lives and erect monuments to the heroes and patriots who have achieved honor and glory for their country. Such a feeling is not only praiseworthy and commendable in itself, but it inspires the young and future generations with a laudable ambition of emulating the example of their ancestors; it teaches them to love virtue and patriotism, honor and distinction.

In all civilized nations, from the remotest antiquity, it has been their custom to celebrate on public occasions the hallowed deeds of the great and good. The polished, intellectual and æsthetic-loving Greeks were eminent in their exertions to perpetuate the remembrance of the noble deeds of their great men, their great heroes, statesmen and patriots. Hence their eloquent and thrilling funeral orations, their magnificent monuments, their exquisite statues and their beautiful paintings. A modern historian has said that "a Grecian knew that if he perished in achieving any heroic deeds his country would honor his ashes and watch over his memory; that his glory, heightened by matchless masters of eloquence, would flash like lightning from the heavens; that lovely bosoms would beat high at his name; that hands the fairest in Greece would yearly wreathe his tomb with garlands, and that tears would be shed forever on the spot by the brave." The warlike Romans, full of virtue, honor and patriotism, tried to emulate the Grecians in this respect by honoring and glorifying their ancestors. We discover the same national trait displayed in the magnificent antiquities of Egypt and all the Eastern nations.

The Chinese have carried this laudable sentiment to excess, and they worship their illustrious ancestors as gods and demigods! In illustrating how strong this feeling is in England, and has been for centuries past, I need only refer to Westminster Abbey. France, glorious and fickle, has shown her appreciation of her heroes and men of science by the magnificent structures in Paris to their memory. Scarcely a distinguished man dies in New England without a biographical sketch being written of him, portraying his virtues, his talents and his public services. In due course of time, a public monument is erected to his memory.

But how has it been in South Carolina? This proud little State has produced as many sons eminent for their talents, genius, eloquence, statesmanship and heroism as Massachusetts herself, the chief of New England, and where are their written lives and public monuments? It must be confessed that we have been culpably remiss in cherishing the memory and recording the virtues of our great men. No life has ever been written of that grand old Roman, Charles Cotesworth Pinckney ("millions for defence, but not a cent for tribute"), whose honor, patriotism and talents may have been equalled, but never surpassed. He rests in his grave without a public monument. John Rutledge, who was pronounced by Patrick Henry to be without a peer for eloquence in the first Continental Congress, and who was clothed with dictatorial powers in South Carolina during the Revolutionary war, never had a monument erected to his memory or a memoir of his life written, till a stranger undertook to write the lives of the Chief Justices of the United States, and, through necessity, had to include that of Chief Justice Rutledge.

In the same neglected category is the name of William Lowndes, the great American statesman, who would have been President of the United States had he lived.

John C. Calhoun, who possessed the mind of Aristotle with the purest virtue, has only had a sketch of his life written as a sort of introduction to his political works, and his grave in Charleston is without a monument. The memory of Langdon Cheves, who was one of the intellectual giants of his day, Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, president of the old United States Bank, and Judge of South Carolina, has been utterly neglected. Robert Y. Hayne, the peer of Webster in debate in the Senate of the United States and the idol of South Carolina whilst living, has no public monument nor life written. George McDuffie, who, Colonel Benton said, "was equal to Demosthenes in his prime," is almost forgotten. The same may be said of Hugh S. Legare, the most accomplished scholar and orator of America; James L. Petigru, the great lawyer, loved by all who knew him for his noble heart and great intellectual endowments and learning; William C. Preston, the Cicero of the Senate, and James H. Hamilton, the Bayard of the South. Any one of these names would have been enough to illustrate an era and distinguish a nation.

When we find the memory of such men as I have enumerated neglected and their virtues and public services forgotten, we need not be surprised to know that the heroic achievements and patriotism of Cleveland, Pickens, Williams, Sumter and Marion have never been properly commemorated by their State; no lives of them have been written, except Marion, and no monuments erected to their memory. We are now enjoying the liberty and independence which they achieved for their State and country, and we have almost forgotten their services and sufferings, the blood they shed for us, and the example they set us!

Thirty years ago a gentleman told me that he went to visit the grave of General Sumter, "the game-cock of Carolina," and actually drove his sulky on it before he was aware of the sacred spot! There was nothing to designate the place where the old hero rested! I remember visiting, when a boy, the grave of Colonel Benjamin Cleveland, on the banks of the Tuguloo, in Pendleton District—now Oconee County—and I found it in the neglected state that Sumter's was, except, I think, there may have been a granite slab covering it; but the brambles and briars and bushes had grown up all around where lay the great hero of King's Mountain! Many years afterwards, in passing through that neighborhood, I inquired of a farmer if Colonel Cleveland's grave was still neglected, and he replied that it looked like an old hog pen! Some one had built, years before, a square pen around it out of pine-saplings and they had rotted down.

I have found great difficulty in collecting material for a sketch of Colonel Cleveland's life and character. The events of his life, like the pine poles which surrounded his grave, have rotted out of the memory of the present generation, and there are few living who know anything about him. My father and Colonel Benjamin Cleveland lived neighbors on Tuguloo River, Pendleton district, South Carolina, for many years, after the Revolutionary war, and until the death of the Colonel. I have heard him speak of "the old Colonel" very often, who died many years before I was born. He said he once visited him, a bitter cold frosty morning, and found him sitting in his piazza, with nothing on but a thin calico morning gown, and that his legs were of a purple color. He said to him: "This is a very cold morning, Colonel Cleveland." "No, no," replied the old hero, "it is a very fine morning, and I have come out to enjoy the fresh morning air." He weighed at that time four or five hundred pounds, and in consequence of his enormous obesity was as insensible to cold as he had been in his younger days to fear.

Colonel Cleveland was one of nature's great men, great in every respect, great in person, great in heart and great in mind. He was a man of extraordinary judgment, good sense and practical wisdom. He was honest, truthful and honorable, and discharged his duties frankly and fearlessly. Like General Andrew Jackson, when he hung Arbuthnot and Ambrister, in the Florida or Indian Campaign, he was never afraid to take responsibility. Some time after Colonel Cleveland's removal to South Carolina, and whilst the nearest court was held at "Ninety-Six," a notorious tory and horse thief was captured and carried to Cleveland's. His captors wished to know what should be done with their prisoner. The old Colonel told them that the best disposition they could make of him was to take him out and hang him. This would meet the ends of justice speedily and save a good deal of trouble and expense. The fellow was accordingly hung up to the limb of a tree in the yard until he was dead, and then he was cut down and buried.

It is well known that General Butler, of Revolutionary memory, the father of Judge Butler and Governor Butler, and grandfather of our present Senator Butler, did the same thing, at old Cambridge, about the same time. Judge Burke was holding court. General Butler and his friends went into the court house in the presence of the Judge, and took a prisoner out of the dock, and hung him. He was a notorious tory, horse-thief and assassin. It is said his wife came and implored the Judge to save her husband. His Honor, who was an Irishman, replied: "Before God, my good woman, I dare not do so, for they would hang me if I did."

When county courts were established in the upper part of South Carolina, Colonel Benjamin Cleveland, General Andrew Pickens and General Robert Anderson were appointed Judges of the court for Pendleton county. Colonel Cleveland, though a judge, was, like his associates, no lawyer, and had a great contempt for the technicalities of the law and all its delays. His desire was to administer justice promptly and fairly. After hearing the evidence in a case, his clear mind and good sense came quickly to a conclusion, and he did not care to hear argument. He would frequently take a snooze whilst the lawyers were making long prosy speeches in the case. Being very fleshy, he would sometimes snore so loud in his snooze as to interrupt the proceedings of the court. His associates on the Bench would then give him a hunch and wake him up. These county courts were very Democratic institutions, something like the old Pie Pander courts of England.

In the discharge of his judicial duties, Colonel Cleveland acted according to the advice given by a learned English barrister, to Chief Justice Gordon, of South Carolina. Gordon was an Irishman and had never read law. After his appointment he consulted a distinguished lawyer in London, to know what books he had better read. The lawyer advised the newly appointed Chief Justice not to bother himself with books or law, but to decide every case according to his sense of justice and right. "If you undertake to decide according to law," said this eminent barrister, "you will be sure to make a mistake."

Colonel Benjamin Cleveland was a native of Virginia. He and his brother Robert moved to Wilkes county, North Carolina, after they were grown, and just before the commencement of the Revolutionary War. The Colonel, like General Washington, received only the rudiments of an English education, and studied surveying. Wilkes county was then just being settled, and there was great demand for the services of some one to survey the lands of the settlers and mark out their boundaries. No doubt the Colonel found this a profitable employment, and it made him acquainted with all the people of the county. He was chosen their first representative in the Legislature, in 1778. In 1779 he was elected to the State Senate. He had risen also from the rank of an ensign in the militia to that of captain of a company.

The Cherokee Indians annoyed the settlers of Wilkes county very much about this time, and their depredations and assassinations continued until the expedition of General Rutherford, of North Carolina, and General Williamson, of South Carolina, put a stop to them. Colonel Cleveland commanded a company in this expedition, under General Rutherford. The privations, hardships and suffering of the soldiers and officers, as described by General Lenoir, who was a lieutenant in Cleveland's company, were very great indeed, and almost incredible. But Cleveland was at that time a perfect athlete, with a large frame and an iron constitution, capable of enduring almost any fatigue and hardship. He was bold, fearless and self-willed, full of hope and buoyancy of spirits. He was accustomed to the forest and climbing mountains in hunting wild animals and surveying.

This expedition of Rutherford and Williamson completely subdued the Cherokee nation. Their cornfields were destroyed and their towns and villages burnt. But on the return of the troops, having subdued one enemy, they found another at home in their midst. The tories of that region of country were nothing more nor less than robbers, plunderers and assassins. Their depredations were, perhaps, worse than those of the Indians. Colonel Cleveland was the chief commander and leader of the whigs. Wheeler, in his History of North Carolina, says: "Cleveland was the leader of a hundred fights with the tories." On some occasion he apprehended two of their outlaws, Jones and Coil, and hung them! Soon afterwards, whilst all alone, Cleveland himself was captured by the tories, and they told him to write passes for them. He was an indifferent scribe, wrote slowly, and was in no hurry to finish his task, for he believed they intended to kill him after he had written their papers. Whilst thus engaged in writing, his brother, Robert Cleveland, came up with a party of whigs, fired on the tories, and secured his brother. Riddle, who commanded this tory company, was afterwards captured, with his son and another follower, carried before Cleveland, and by his orders all three of them were hung near the Mulberry Meeting House, now Wilkesboro'. General Lenoir relates another instance of Cleveland's summary punishment of a tory thief. The General, who was then a captain in Colonel Cleveland's regiment, apprehended a fellow stealing his stirrups from his saddle. He carried him to the Colonel who ordered his thumbs to be put in a notch in an arbor fork, and receive fifteen lashes. This, says the General, gave origin to the expression, "to the notch." It may well be supposed that Cleveland was, as the historian states, "the terror of the tories."

After the capture of Charleston, and the defeat of General Gates at Camden, Lord Cornwallis thought South Carolina was completely subdued, and that the time had arrived when he might rally all the tories, disaffected and timid, to his standard. For this purpose he sent Colonel Ferguson, a bold, daring, skilful and active officer of the British army, to stir up the loyalists in the upper parts of North and South Carolina. Botta, the Italian Historian of the American Revolution, whose work is a most admirable one, says the greater part of those who repaired to Colonel Ferguson's standard, "were of the most profligate and most ferocious description of men." "Believing anything admissible with the sanction of their chief, they put everything on their passage to fire and sword!" These atrocious excesses inflamed the whigs with the desire of revenge. Without any authority from Congress or the State authorities, they assembled and demanded of their officers to lead them on to battle. They had no commissaries or quartermasters, no provision or baggage wagons. Each man carried his wallet, and his blanket and his gun. They slept on the earth, and slaked their thirst in the streams they passed over. Their only food was ears of corn parched and pumpkins roasted.

These brave mountaineers were under the command of Colonel Campbell, of Virginia, Colonels Cleveland, Shelby, Sevier and McDowell, of North Carolina, and Colonels Williams, Lacey, Hawthorn and Hill, of South Carolina. Their united forces numbered sixteen hundred. They selected one thousand of this number and mounted them on their fleetest horses, who overtook Ferguson at King's Mountain. The troops were divided into three divisions, under Colonels Lacey, Campbell and Cleveland. Lacey with the South Carolinians commenced the attak on the west. The other two attacked on the east and in the centre. They had rode all night in pursuit of Ferguson, who was aware of their pursuit. It is said that when he came to King's Mountain he profanely exclaimed, "this is a position from which God Almighty cannot drive us!"

Dr. David Ramsay, in his History of the United States, says that Colonel Cleveland addressed his command before going into battle "in the following plain unvarnished language," which showed his good sense and knowledge of human nature:

"My brave fellows! We have beat the tories and we can beat them again. They are all cowardly. If they had the spirit of men, they would join with their fellow-citizens in supporting the independence of their country. When engaged you are not to wait for the word of command from me. I will show you by my example how to fight. I can undertake no more. Every man must consider himself an officer and act from his own judgment. Fire as quick as you can and stand as long as you can. When you can do no better get behind trees, or retreat; but I beg of you not to run quite off. If we be repulsed, let us make a point to return and renew the fight. Perhaps we may have better luck in the second attempt than in the first. If any of you be scared, such have leave to retire; and they are requested immediately to take themselves off."

It is very likely this "plain unvarnished" speech had a most salutary influence on the minds of the soldiers. It was obeyed in the fight to the very letter. They did get behind trees and rocks and fired. They were repelled and did "not run quite off." They came back to the charge and renewed the fight. They did "have better luck in the second attempt." Colonel Ferguson, who fought desperately, was shot down, and his command immediately surrendered. There were eight hundred prisoners taken, and two hundred and twenty-five killed and wounded. The loss of the whigs was very small. But in this small number was Colonel Williams, of Ninety-Six, a bold and gallant officer, who was willing to offer up his life on the altar of his country for her independence and liberty. Ten of the tories were hung for their crimes and in retaliation for the whigs who had been executed in Georgia and South Carolina. Some of these ten were very prominent men, and had no doubt been active in stirring up the lawless "ferocious men" who had committed so many atrocious acts on the whigs. Colonel Cleveland knew them, and he was not the man to pass lightly over atrocious acts committed on his friends and neighbors. There was no sickly humanity about him. He was a just man and a bold, fearless man, not afraid to punish when punishment was merited. He was a stern man, and loved justice more than he did mercy. He knew that very often mercy to a criminal was death to an innocent man.

There is no doubt that most of the tories in the upper part of South Carolina and North Carolina joined the English for the purpose of plundering and robbing. They had no more political principle than they had moral principle. If they joined the whigs, there were no English for them to rob and plunder in the night. Therefore all the unprincipled and vicious became tories, to plunder and steal. They cared nothing for either king or country. Their leaders thought the rebellion would ultimately be suppressed, and they would be rewarded for their loyalty with office and honor, like the recreant sons of the Carolinas of the present day, when under the radical regimé.

The battle of King's Mountain, in which Colonel Cleveland acted so conspicuous a part, was the turning point of the American Revolution. Everything went better for the Continental Congress afterwards. General Cornwallis was checked in his march into Virginia. The battle of the Cowpens took place in January following. General Green, having taken command of the Southern army, fought the battle of Guilford Court House. Cornwallis marched on, and his whole army was captured at Yorktown.

After this great victory at King's Mountain, the militia, who had volunteered their services, returned home, like the Scotch Highlanders who always went home after a victory, and would then return to the army again, after resting and recruiting and enjoying their spoils. Colonel Cleveland no doubt went home with his brave troops, and I have no information as to his subsequent military career. He may have been in the battle of Guilford, and Wheeler states that he was; but without giving any particulars of his services, and I do not know that any other historian mentions the fact. It is not likely, however, that the bold, fearless and enterprising patriotism of Cleveland could be idle whilst the war continued.

In the history of North Carolina, Wheeler states that Colonel Ben. Cleveland, the hero of King's Mountain, "lived and died in Wilkes County, N. C.!" This is a mistake, and I am surprised that it should have been made. Shortly after the close of the Revolutionary War, Colonel Ben. Cleveland moved to South Carolina and settled on the Tuguloo River, in Pendleton District, now Oconee County, and there he died, and now lies buried there, as I have already stated. The exact time of his removal I cannot give. My father moved from Greenville into the same neighborhood where Colonel Cleveland resided in 1788. I have often heard him say that when he and his brother, Nathemiel Perry, opened their store, five or six miles below Colonel Cleveland's, the old Colonel and his two sons, John and Absalom, and his son-in-law, who lived in North Carolina and was a General, but whose name I have forgotten, came down to pay them a visit and trade with them. John Cleveland, who was an intemperate man, and full of fun and mischief, had acquired the soubriquet of "Devil John." He introduced himself to my father by that name, and said that he expected to trade and drink a good deal with him, but that as my father and brother seemed to be genteel young men, he would behave himself genteelly whilst at their store. This promise he kept, and my father thought well of him; but he was afterwards killed in some drunken row in Georgia.

The following extract of a letter received from one of Colonel Benjamin Cleveland's great-nieces, is interesting, and gives an account of the old Hero's descendants.

"Colonel Benjamin Cleveland was born in Virginia, and with my grandfather moved to North Carolina probably in the year 1775, and settled on the Yadkin, in Wilkes County, where he remained until after the Revolution.

"The regiment which did such effective service, and which Colonel Cleveland led with such distinguished gallantry at the battle of King's Mountain, was composed of hardy mountaineers. Men that slept upon the heather, men that quaffed the mountain rill, drawn from the counties of Surry and Wilkes.

"My grandfather, Robert Cleveland, was in command of a company in his brother's regiment, and his nephew, Jesse Franklin, afterwards Governor of North Carolina, was the Adjutant. I have often heard my father say the distinguishing traits of Colonel Cleveland's character were indomitable courage and iron will.

"It seems from Wheeler's History that he aided his country not only in 'arms,' but also in 'council,' serving for several years in both branches of the Legislature.

"At what time Colonel Cleveland removed to South Carolina and settled in Pendleton District I do not know. He had only two sons, John and Absalom. John was a man of good abilities, but died early from intemperance, leaving four daughters and two sons, Benjamin and Fouche Cleveland. These the grandfather took and educated. The daughters married prominent men in the State of Georgia; one, Colonel James Smith, a lawyer of Macon, another a relative, a Mr. Franklin, of Athens, and their only daughter married Governor McDonald.

"General Ben. Cleveland was, I believe, a member for some years of the Georgia Legislature. His daughter, Catherine, married General Rush, of Texas. Many years ago I had the pleasure of meeting with the General and hearing him make a most sensible speech in the United States Senate.

"Colonel Cleveland has had, and still has, many descendants who reflect credit on his name. Colonel Robert Smith, his great-grandson, the Christian soldier and gentleman, fell at the battle of Malvern Hill, gallantly leading the 44th Georgia Regiment into action. And his great-great granddaughter, Mrs. Eliza Harper, of Minden, La., is well known in the world of letters as a poetess and fine writer of prose."

Absalom Cleveland, the other son of old Colonel Ben. Cleveland, was very eccentric, and in the latter part of his life, deranged. For several years he refused to say a word to any one, and the first time he spoke after his long silence, was to tell a servant who was putting wood on the fire to "stop," that he had put enough on! Before his death he in a great measure recovered his mind, and made his will which was contested in court, and established. I was of counsel for the executor in the trial of the case. He left one daughter, I know, who married Thomas Horthen, of Oconee County. He may have had other children.

In 1841 the Legislature of North Carolina formed a new county out of Rutherford and Lincoln Counties, and named it Cleveland, in honor of the memory of the old hero of King's Mountain. This was nothing more than an act of merited justice on the part of the State to one who did such gallant service in the Revolutionary War. In the battle of King's Mountain Colonel Cleveland captured an English drum which he kept and exhibited to his friends who visited him at his residence on the Tuguloo River. I remember hearing Judge Clayton, of Georgia, speak of seeing this drum on one of his visits to the old Colonel. What became of it I cannot ascertain. It would be an interesting relic to exhibit at the centennial celebration of the battle of King's Mountain.

Colonel Benjamin Cleveland had two brothers and a sister, and he may have had others. Robert Cleveland, one of his brothers, and a captain in his regiment at the battle of King's Mountain, was the father of Captain Jeremiah Cleveland, the patriarch of Greenville, and Jesse Cleveland of Spartanburg, both remarkable for their good sense, wisdom, practical judgment and integrity of character. His brother, John Cleveland, was a Baptist preacher, and very successful in his addition of members to his church, on Chaugo River, Oconee County. He used to baptize as many as fifty on a Sabbath, and it is said that he once remarked, "if one in ten proved to be good Christians, he had made a good haul." His sister married a gentleman by the name of Franklin and was the father of Governor Franklin of North Carolina.

It is said in Wheeler's History of North Carolina that Colonel Cleveland had an impediment in his speech which prevented his engaging in public life. I never heard of this impediment before, and doubt its accuracy. There is no doubt that if Colonel Cleveland had been educated he would have been a great and distinguished man, more so than he was. He was, as I have already said, a great man by nature. But in his day there were few schools, academies and colleges in the land, and a scholar in the backwoods of Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina, was a rare thing. Most of the patriots and heroes of the Revolution in this region of country were illiterate men. Hence, justice has never been done to their services and memory. A great many battles were fought and gallant actions achieved which, had they occurred in the Northern States, would have been blazoned in history.

The farm on which Colonel Cleveland lived, after his removal to South Carolina, and where his remains lie buried, now belongs to Dr. William Earle. It is situated in the fork of Tuguloo and Chaugo Rivers, in Oconee County. The house in which he lived was a large wooden framed building, on the banks of the Tuguloo, commanding a fine view of the river for miles, and beautifully situated. It was afterwards burned down, and I remember seeing, whilst a boy, the chimneys still standing. The farm is a valuable one, although it has now been in cultivation nearly a century. A large portion of it consists of rich low grounds on the Tuguloo River. The country around is broken and full of hills, The mountains, too, of Georgia and South Carolina are close by, and present a grand panoramic view to the spectator.

NOTE.—Since the above sketch was written a monument has been erected over the resting-place of Colonel Cleveland, by his relatives.

2. Biographical Sketches

CLEVELAND

Benjamin Cleveland came from Orange County, Virginia, with his wife, Mary Graves, and her father and his family, about 1769, and settled near the foot of the Blue Ridge, on the waters of Roaring River, a northern tributary of the Yadkin, in what was then Rowan, afterwards Surry, and a few years later, Wilkes County. Here Cleveland, with the aid of Mr Graves' servants, opened a farm, raised stock, and devoted much of his time to hunting. At some subsequent period, he, according to Draper's "King's Mountain and its Heroes" located on the noted tract, on the northern bank of the Yadkin, known as the Round About—taking its name from the horse-shoe shape of the land, nearly surrounded by the river.

From Daniel Boone, who was among the earliest of the pioneers of the Yadkin Valley, Cleveland learned of the Kentucky country, its wild charms, rich lands, and teeming game. In the summer of about 1772, in company with Jesse Bond, Jesse Walton, Edward Rice, and William Hightower, he set out on a trip of hunting and exploration, in quest of this beautiful land of Kentucky. But upon reaching Cumberland Gap they were unexpectedly met and plundered by a party of Cherokees, of all their guns and horses, and ordered to leave the Indian hunting grounds. They had no alternative but to return to their settlements. After undergoing great hardships they arrived back home in a nearly famished condition. Several months afterwards, in a thrilling adventure with a chosen party of friends, Cleveland recovered his horses from the noted Cherokee chief, Big Bear.

But Cleveland's hunting days were about to end. The story of Colonial taxation by the King and Parliament reached the Yadkin Valley, and Cleveland was among the first to resent the threatened tyranny. During 1775, when his neighbors and friends of the Upper Yadkin Valley had occasion to go to Cross Creek (now the city of Fayetteville) to dispose of their surplus productions, and purchase their supplies of iron, sugar, salt, and other necessaries, they were compelled, before they were permitted to buy or sell, to take the oath of allegiance to the King. When Cleveland heard of these tyrannical acts, and attempts to forestall the politics of the people, he swore roundly that he would like nothing better than to dislodge those scoundrels at Cross Creek; whereupon he marched down from the mountains with a party of volunteer riflemen and captured a number of outlaws.

When the Cherokees were inveigled by the British into hostilities, Captain Cleveland, in the summer of 1776, served a tour of duty in scouting on the western frontier of the State. In the fall of 1776, when General Rutherford led a strong force against the Cherokees, Cleveland and his company went on the campaign, in the Surry regiment, under Col Joseph Williams and Maj Joseph Winston. Wm Lenoir, who was Cleveland's lieutenant, was accustomed, in after years, to recount the hardships and privations the troops had to suffer on that service—often destitute of provisions, without tents, with but few blankets, dressed in clothing made of crude materials, derived from hemp, tow, and the wild nettle. Though often harassed on their march by parties in ambush, there was no general engagement—Capt Cleveland sharing in the skirmishes and bushwhackings of the campaign. The villages and settlements of the hostile Cherokees were laid waste, their crops and provisions destroyed, and they were compelled to sue for peace.

In the autumn of 1777, Capt Cleveland attended the legislature—not as a member, but to use his influence for the division of Surry, and the formation of a new county, for the better convenience of the Upper Yadkin settlements. Wilkes County, thus formed, was named in honor of John Wilkes, noted for his steady opposition in Parliament to the American war. In March, 1778, when the new county was organized, Cleveland was placed at the head of the commission of Justices, and was made Colonel of the militia. In 1778, he was chosen to represent Wilkes County in the House of Commons, and was regarded as one of the popular leaders of the mountain section of the State.

On many occasions he was engaged in suppressing the Tories, capturing and hanging some of their notorious leaders and outlaws. Then followed his King's Mountain campaign—the great service of his life. His whole career during the war goes to show that he was severe in his treatment of the Tories—perhaps not unjustly so, considering the times and circumstances of an exposed frontier, when the execution of civil law was so infrequent and uncertain. It was during these times that Cleveland ordered three Tory outlaws to be hung from an oak tree that still stands near the court house at Wilkesboro. All admitted that although the execution was summary, it was nevertheless just. Cleveland was active at this period in sending out strong scouting parties to scour the mountain regions, and if possible, utterly break up the Tory bands still infesting the frontiers. His Wilkes riflemen had, by this time, acquired a reputation of which they were justly proud. They were generally known as Cleveland's Heroes, sometimes as Cleveland's Bull Dogs; while the Tories called them Cleveland's Devils.

One of these detachments caught Zachariah Wells, a Tory desperado, and brought him to Hughes' Bottom, about a mile below Col Cleveland's Round About residence, near the mouth of Hughes' Creek. Here (Draper's King's Mountain and its Heroes," page 445), young James Gwyn (Table 21), a youth of thirteen, with a colored boy, was at work in the corn field, when Col Cleveland, who had joined those having the prisoner in charge, of whom Lieut Elisha Reynolds, Cleveland's two sons and his brother, formed a part, took the plow lines from the horse, with which to hang Wells to a tree on the river bank.

Young Gwyn, who knew little of the stern realities of war, was shocked at the thought of so summary an execution. Intimately acquainted with Col Cleveland, he begged the Colonel not to hang the poor fellow, who looked so pitiful, and was suffering from his former wound, greatly exciting his sympathies. "Jimmie, my son," said Cleveland tenderly, "he is a bad man; we must hang all such danmisery"; while Capt Bob Cleveland, who was present, was cursing the wincing Tory at a vigorous rate. With tears coursing down his cheeks, the Colonel adjusted the rope, regretting the necessity for hanging the trembling culprit—remembering vividly the rough treatment he had so recently received at the hands of Wells at the Old Fields place, (on New River); and firmly convinced that the lives of the patriots of the Yadkin Valley would be safer, and their slumbers all the more peaceful, when their suffering country was rid of all such vile desperadoes. Such was Cleveland's philosophy, and such was his patriotism. Wells soon dangled from a convenient tree, and his body was buried in the same sand and loam on the bank of the Yadkin.

Col Cleveland on seeing a very weedy corn patch, said to a man standing near, named Bishop, "Are you a tory or a patriot?" He replied, "Sir, I am just a plain farmer." "Well, that being the case," said Cleveland, "the next time I find so many weeds in this corn, you will be given 39 lashes!" From that time on, this was the cleanest and best cultivated corn field to be seen anywhere!

At the close of the war, Cleveland having lost his fine Round About plantation by a better title, now turned his attention to the fine region of the Tugaloo, on the western borders of South Carolina—a country that had greatly attracted him, when, many years before, he returned from the Cherokee Nation with the horses he had reclaimed from their plundering warriers. In 1785, he moved to his new home in the forks of Tugaloo River and Chauga Creek, in the present County of Oconee, accompanied by not a few of his kinsmen and old companions in arms. Col Cleveland served many years as a Judge of the Court of old Pendleton County, with General Pickens and Col Robert Anderson as his associates; Col Cleveland "frequently taking a snooze on the bench," says Governor Perry, "while the lawyers were making long, prosy speeches"; if he snored too loudly, his judicial associates would give him a nudge, and wake him up. He nevertheless administered justice promptly and fairly. For several years before his death, he became so unwieldy in size that he could not mount his favorite saddle horse, and leave his home.

He was survived by two sons and a daughter, whose descendants are numerous and respectable—many of them becoming prominent. His wife preceded him to the grave some half dozen years. In the prime of life, Col Cleveland was a little short of six feet, finely proportioned, possessing a pleasing and intelligent countenance.

North Carolina deservedly commemorated the services of this noble hero of King's Mountain by naming a County and town after him. With a limited education but a naturally vigorous intellect, he exerted a commanding influence among a frontier people; and though despotic in his nature, and severe on the Tories, his patriotic activity did much in preserving the western portion of the Carolinas from British and Tory ascendancy. Much has deservedly been written to preserve the memory of Ben Cleveland—to all Tories the terror of terrors, and to others, the jolly "Old Round About" of the Yadkin.

Prominent mention should be made of Benjamin Cleveland's brothers: (1) Capt Robert Cleveland (1744-1812) of King's Mt fame; (2) Lt Larkin Cleveland King's Mt) who moved to Tenn; (3) Rev John Cleveland, pastor of Brier Creek church.

ALLEN

Richard Allen (1741-1832) was born in Maryland. He came to Wilkes Co., in 1770; served on the Cross Creek expedition in 1776; early in 1780, he commanded a company for the relief of Charleston; then went in pursuit of Bryan's Tories; and led his company on the King's Mountain campaign. He served a tour of duty early in 1781 under Genl Greene. He was the first Sheriff of Wilkes County, and a member of the House of Commons in 1793. He attained to the rank of Colonel in the militia.

Richard Allen Jr was, like his father, connected with the early and heroic history of Wilkes Co. He was also elected sheriff and rated one of the leading and influential citizens. He m. 1st Sarah Hampton; 2nd Margaret (Peggy) Hampton; both were daughters of Henry Hampton of Hamptonville. Child of the 1st marriage: Sarah (Allen) Asbury. Children of the 2nd marriage: (I) Lodemia Allen m. Prof John Stacy, children; (1) Charles, (2) Edgar, (3) Cora; (II) Addie Allen (Miss Add)—a striking personality—who lived and died (1919, age 90) at the old home about three miles north of Ronda, the last of the name in Wilkes. There were two sons by the 1st or 2nd marriage, one of whom was Thos H. Allen, Memphis, Tenn, owner of large cotton plantation on the Mississippi.

REYNOLDS

Elisha Reynolds (1755-1836) was born in what became Wilkes County. He served on Rutherford's campaign against the Tories; with Cleveland at King's Mountain; and shortly after Col Cleveland's capture by the Tories early in 1781, he went with Capt Johnson and others, and broke up the Tory gang who captured him. He was a lieutenant in the latter part of the war, and rendered his country good service.

CLEIVELAND.

The Genealogy of the Cleivelands of Hinckley in Leicestershire, England.

Communicated by H. G. Cleveland, Esq., of Cleveland, Ohio.

I HAVE arranged in modern form, for the Register, the records of Mr. Nichols concerning the Cleivelands of Hinckley, Leicestershire, in order that they may have a permanent place in our libraries for reference. Mr. Nichols prefixed the following dedication:

"To the Right Reverend Father in God, Thomas, Lord Bishop of Dromore, this Genealogy, carefully formed from family deeds, extracts from Registers, and the Information of living Persons, is humbly inscribed by his much obliged and most faithful humble servant, J. Nichols."

It does not appear that Thomas Cleiveland, of the second generation, had a son Moses (as generally supposed) who came from Ipswich, Suffolk, to America about 1635 to 1638; of Woburn, 1641, and the accredited ancestor of all the New England Clevelands. But it may turn out on careful examination that Samuel, baptized June 9, 1622, of whom nothing further is given, was the emigrant who, coming to America on a sudden impulse, and the better to conceal his identity, assumed the name of "Moses," and which he may have concluded, as it served him so well, to retain ever after.

It is, however, my opinion that the Moses Cleveland who came to America as stated, was a son of Samuel[2] Cleiveland, a brother, probably, of Thomas[2] Cleiveland, and the record of whose birth or baptism may be found in York instead of Hinckley.

WILLIAM[1] CLEIVELAND, removed from York, or Yorkshire, to Hinckley, where he died an aged man,* and was buried there January 17, 1630–1. By wife —— he had at least a son,

THOMAS[2] CLEIVELAND, a native of York,† admitted of St. Johns, Cambridge, Nov. 5, 1605, a scholar of Dr. Fell's foundation; took the degree of B.A. 1608; of M.A. 1614; was first of all assistant to the rector of Loughborough; became vicar of Hinckley with the rectory of Stoke and chaplainship of Dadlington annexed, all in Leicestershire, about the beginning of 1621. He was buried at Hinckley, Oct. 26, 1652.‡ Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Cleiveland, was buried at Hinckley July 6, 1649. Children:

i. MARY,[3] bapt. at Loughborough, Oct. 17, 1611; buried there the 19th of the same month.

ii. JOHN[3] (the poet), was bapt. at Loughborough, June 20, 1613; was educated at Hinckley under Mr. Vynes, a noted Puritan; was admitted Sept. 4, 1627, of Christ's College, Cambridge; took the degree of B.A. 1631; M.A. 1635; was admitted March 27, 1634, a fellow of St. John's; so continued till his ejectment by the earl of Manchester, Feb. 13, 1644; was with the king at Oxford; was judge advocate at Newark till its surrender in 1646; seized at Norwich in Nov. 1655, was confined at Yarmouth, but released by Oliver Cromwell; died at Gray's Inn, April 29, 1658; buried May 1, at St. Michael's, College-hill, London.§

† Or of Yorkshire, Lat. Eboracensis in the register of admissions to St. John's College, Cambridge.

‡ In Walker's Sufferings of the Clergy, p. 221, we have the following character of Thomas Cleiveland, M.A., rector of Stoke and vicar of Hinckley. "He was a very great sufferer [for his loyalty and attachment to the ancient constitution of church and state]; was father of the famous John Cleiveland the poet, and had at the time of his sequestration nine [eight] children (several of which, besides the poet, were sufferers also). . . . . He was dispossessed by the committee of Leicester. Died in October, 1652, and was a very worthy person, and of a most exemplary life."

§ See the life and the portrait of the poet in Vol. III. p. 913, of History and Antiquities of Leicestershire.

vii. THOMAS,[5] b. Sept. 27, 1690; d. May 13, 1691.

* Of which he had been incumbent near thirty-seven years, having Feb. 8, 1758, succeeded his father, who had been presented to the same by that excellent prelate Bishop Hough, and instituted by him June 10, 1731. So that the father and son had held this benefice upwards of sixty-three years, even from the birth of the latter, who may be said to have spent his whole life, from his cradle to his death-bed, in the parsonage house at All Saints; for which he had such a predilection, and such an attachment to this his first and only church (although attended with very severe duty, which he continued to the last to discharge himself), that no desire or prospect of preferment could tempt him to forsake it; for the Bishop of Dromore assured me that, to his knowledge, Mr. Cleiveland once refused the offer of a considerable benefice, which would have required him to abandon his beloved parishioners at All Saints. This conscientious, worthy clergyman (who has died without issue) was the last of the name of Cleiveland of the family at Hinckley.

In later years - after Rev. Absalom moved to Tugaloo Valley. He inherited lands on both sides of Tugaloo River from his father.
He later became mentally disturbed. One report was that it happened when his wife died. He would not drink water nor would he talk. Before his death he recovered his faculties & found some of his sons-in-law had squandered his property and sued for return of it. His will was contested in court, but upheld. He was buried beside his father on Cleveland lands in Oconee Co. according to an old colored man, Frank Smith who dug his grave. Thos. Benjamin Cleveland was married to a Miss Mary Graves, a very amiable young lady who exercised great influence over him in moralizing his future conduct. William Graves had but two children (both daughters) The other daughter married a gentleman -------.
Old William Graves had a good living consisting of a tolerably good plantation, a smart bunch of Virginia born negroes and plenty of other good property. Benjamin settled upon his father in law's plantation, having but little property of his own as might be expected from a man of his habits and pursuits. There they had two sons born, Absolem and John, the only children they ever had. More about the Graves slaves and the move to N.C. Writer of this unknown

Draper Manuscripts, Wisconsin Historical Society Collections.

Lyman C. Draper in the mid to latter quarter of the 19th century correspended with literally hundreds of people in preparation for his book "King's Mountain and Its Heroes". He was a very meticulous researcher, and he contacted virtually everybody who ever knew the Clevelands or anything about them. The manuscrip collection consists of original letters from these people who knew of the Cleveland family. Many letters were from family members themselves, from neighbors, cousins, uncles, etc. of Ben Cleveland and his descendants. The University of Georgia has Draper's complete collection on microfilm. All of my data on the Clevelands (with a few scattered exceptions) were gleaned from letters written to Draper from about 1840 to 1870. Many of the letters contain vague or erroneous data; I have tried to get a concensus from the mass of letters, discarding data from those which do not seem to agree with the majority opinion. This is perhaps an inadequate research method, but in the absence of corrobating data, the best one.

The Draper collection consists of 30 or more full rolls of 35mm microfilm, containing thousands and thousands of documents. Only a very tiny fraction of these refer to Ben Cleveland, but even so, consists of hundreds of letters. Reel 3vv and 500 contain the principal data. Some letters are from John Cleveland's (Sr.) granddaughters. One, Mrs. Lingow, gave much data in 1874 when she was 86 years old. She had a sister, a Mrs. Watson, who also contributed much. You really would need several days of reading the film to even get an overall picture of the magnitude of Draper's data on the Clevelands.

With reference to John Cleveland's (Sr.) wife, the best information that I could get from all those letters is that her name was Martha Coffee. If she had any other I'm not aware of it. I believe most of the old letters spell it Coffee, but it quite possible should be Coffey. I can't find my original notes about William Graves but I'm certain this data came from one of the Draper correspondents. According to Mrs. Martha Staley, a great granddaughter of Benj. Cleveland (granddaughter ~~from~~ of Absalom) Mary Graves was a descendant of Oliver Cromwell, the English "Usurper". Mrs. Staley said Benj. Cleveland was born in Halifax county, Va., but more say Orange County. H. M. Stokes" Memoir of Cleveland, included in the documents, says Cleveland was born in Prince William County, Va. (take your pick).

Frankly, if you read all those letters you will find less "Hero-fication" of Benjamin Cleveland and his family the closer the writer of the moment was to Cleveland's time. In my article I touched a few of these points very lightly, and was tongue-lashed severly by some of Cleveland's descendants in Oconer county. I think if you will read my little article carefully, though, you will see that I have given him every honor due him. For example, one letter written to Draper on Jan. 1, 1843 (the writer's name was evidently omitted) says that Mary Graves was a good woman, but of weak intellect. Another quote "Absalom, like his mother, had but little sense - and was good because he was not bad." This writer had been baptised by Rev. John Cleveland in 1791 and knew the Cleveland family back in Virginia. He knew Benjamin Cleveland personally. I would now like to answer a part of one of your questions by entering here a verbatim extract from my notes (I just found the writer's name - it was Col. William C. Martin). I recollect that his manuscript was extremely well written and clear; he was obviously a well-educated man. He was a close friend of both Col. Benjamin Cleveland and Gen'l Andrew Pickens. My notes, as I wrote;

"When young, back in Virginia, Benjamin Cleveland, though married, had an illegitimate daughter. She married a man named Evan Edwards; they moved"to the west" and had several children, and were poor. Cleveland asked the writer's father, who knew Edwards, to ask his daughter to come to him and he would help her. The writer (Wm. Martin) knew her in Virginia but had no idea she was Cleveland's daughter until Cleveland told him. The writer sent word to her and she came from Powell Valley (in N. C., I think), to Tugaloo, where Cleveland was then living. The Indians had killed her husband, and she was in dire circumstances. The writer went to Cleveland and told him that his daughter was nearby, and Cleveland wept. Said he did not know what to do - that he was afraid of his wife and his son, John. *John was a large and terrible man and held a rod of terror over all around him. Cleveland did tell his family, though and they said they would receive the daughter as one of their own, which they did. By then her children had been moved down, and she settled near Cleveland's home. She was quite a respectable woman, remarried, and did well." (Somewhere else in my notes, which I can't find at the moment, says she married a Mr. Wylie, from Georgia, and had several well-known and prominent childre

* "DEVIL" JOHN

The above tale did not get into my article, simply because I wouldn't want to embarrass anyo but as you see Cleveland did have a daughter. I"m not sure I have her name but if I find it I'll send it to you.

Perhaps, you will feel, as have others before you, that I have wronged the memory of Cleveland - but honext research, honestly reported, is what I shall do. Cleveland was indee a man among men, and the kind of man who forged us a nation. This doesn't mean, however, that he was an angel.

ORIGIN OF THE CLEVELAND FAMILY

The earliest Cleveland of record was Thorkil de (of) Cleveland in the year 1066, Yorkshire, England.

The District of Cleveland in the North Riding of Yorkshire, England is the original and ancient seat of the Cleveland Family, and from this place the family name is derived. Although not set down in the map as a geographical division, Cleveland is so beautiful and popular a part of England as to have been the subject of three histories (each elegantly illustrated with copper, steel, wood engravings and maps.)

The best known authorities on surnames and their dirivation, state that Cleveland is derived from Cliffs. A chorographical description of England, and Scotland, by William Camden, translates as follows: From Whitby the shore retires to the west near Cleveland, so named, as it should seem, from the hills which we call Cliffs, ridges of mountains.

Further in Camden's Britannia, it states this: Cleveland, so called, as it seems, from precipices which in our language we call Cliffs, for it is situated by the side of several steep hills from the foot of which the country falls into plain fertile ground.

ORD States that in monuments of antiquity, in abbeys, priories, hermitages, castles, fortifications, and encampments; in remains of former grandeur, and relics of great and illustrious families, the vale of Cleveland abounds more than any similar locality in England; in the magnificence, variety, and extent of its natural scenery, Cleveland may compare with any part of the kingdom. Its moors, fruitful valleys, picturesque dales, groves of beech and pine, forests of oak, sublimity of the ocean girding its shores, and towering sea cliffs.

GRAVES gives a catalogue of Cleveland animals and birds. ORD illustrates the well known Cleveland bay horses, and gives a fine Geological Map of the Cleveland coast. Cleveland has a number of fossils and minerals, one of them named Clevelandicus, of marlstone formation -- which have been illustrated by Drs. Young and Bird. There is alum, building stone, and lime. The soil is a strong fertile clay, and red sandy soil.

The Cleveland family was founded, evidently by THORKIL, in all probability of Saxon land owner, who it appears, at or soon after the time of the Norman Conquest, assumed the surname DE CLEVELAND, calling himself THORKIL DE (of) CLEVELAND. He is the earliest Cleveland of record, had his seat, evidently, in or prior to 1066, at Gisborough, Cleveland, county York, England. His first name Thorkil, indicates that he was of Anglo-Saxon ancestry and not of Norman descent, though both these and the Danes were of the same origin. His son Uctred of Cleveland, who was evidently the Uctred, the Saxon land-owner of three manors in the

Thomas Gilbert?

Georgia and Tennessee, and that he had as many slaves. He was one of the first to go to Louisville, Ga., to frame a Constitution for the State of Ga. His daughters, Polly and Betty, were known as the "English Aunts", and were noted for their cooking and immaculate housekeeping. They were fond of growing flowers. Thomas Gilbert died at age past 90, about 1823-1825. About 10 miles north of Hartwell, Ga., on the summit of a beautiful hill overlooking the verdant valley and the limpid stream of the Tugaloo, lie Thomas Gilbert, his wife, Polly, and Betty, peacefully sleeping in what used to be their flower garden, their graves marked with rough, unlettered stones, and covered with tom vines.

Between this hill and the river is another burial ground. About 60 years ago, Rueben Cleveland was buried here. After spreading joy and sunshine for nearly a century, for his was a happy nature, he has gone to rest and the Tugaloo will forever sing to him about the good that he has done, while the tall pines above his grave will always look after him each year by covering his grave with a soft blanket of needles. (This was taken from a book written in 1933).

Also from the same book, under Churches, is found the following: "Tugaloo River flows by many historic places, notably among others, below the mount of Panther Creek on the S.C. side, located not far from the river is the tomb of General Benjamin Cleveland, officer in the Revolution, and hero of King's Mountain. Not far below the old site of Pullen's Ferry and on the Ga. side, is the site of the old home and burial place of Thomas Gilbert, one of the 1st settlers in the country, a soldier in the Revolution, a pioneer Baptist preacher, and prominent in the affairs of church and state in the early days of our country. His grave is on the summit of a beautiful hill overlooking the verdant valley and the Tugaloo, and deserves to be marked in a way appropriate with his devotion to his church and to his country."

COLONEL BENJAMIN CLEVELAND

This patriot and good man was born in Franklin County, Georgia, on the 12th of February 1792, of a family well known in that County as one of the first to settle it. He was one of a family of eleven children, - eight sons and three daughters, - who are well known in Georgia and Alabama. His father John Cleveland, was a son of the Rev. John Cleveland, one of the first settlers of "Old Franklin", when this great State now, was then one of the original thirteen colonies, and was inhabited, for the most part, by the aborigines of the land. The father of Col. Benjamin Cleveland was poor, lived in a new and sparsely settled country, and could educate his children only in a very limited way, Col. Benjamin himself only getting the benefit of the short time of six months at school during his childhood, notwithstanding when he went into manhood he had, by striving and untiring efforts acquired a good stock of information. He was raised on a farm, and very naturally chose the business of planting during his whole life, unless called away from it to serve and defend his country. This occurred frequently during his early manhood. He entered the military service first in the year 1812, as a Lieutenant in the command of Gen. Floyd. When the time for which he first enlisted expired he returned to his native place and raised a new company of volunteers, who elected him their commander. He enlisted them and reenlisted himself for the continuance of that campaign. He bore up bravely under all the hardships and severity of forced marches through the swamps and wildernesses from this State of Louisiana, where he was ordered to join Gen. Jackson in the great and victorious battle of New Orleans, which terminated the memorable war, and his services as a soldier for the time being, crowned with the glories of successful battle and the love of his countrymen for his magnanimity and valor. In the year 1816, he was happily married to Miss Amelia Hooper, with whom he was blessed for fifty-four years. The offspring of this happy union was eleven children, five of whom are now living. He had no aspirations to engage in political life, though he was sent by his County as a delegate to the convention at Milledgeville, presided over by General McIntosh, and served in that capacity one year. When the trouble began with the hostile Creek Indians, Col. Cleveland was among the first to enlist in defense of his country. He was elected Quartermaster and served in that capacity, but when the flash of the battle broke out before him his brave spirit would not allow him to shield its rage under the protection of a "bomb proof office". He would always with sword in hand, uplifted in honor and defense of those who were near and dear to him, share the hardships and dangers of battle to which his country was exposed. In the fierce battle of Pea River against the Creeks, he assumed command of a company of soldiers and voluntarily made a charge against the enemy, which resulted in completely routing them. For this gallantry Gen. Wilburne, in whose command he was engaged, awarded him the choice pony of all the trophies of the battle. This terminated the Creek War, and concluded the fate of the Creek Indians. In 1837 he again enlisted in the service as captain of a company for the purpose of subjugating and collecting the hostile Cherokee Indians, prepatory to moving them West. His eldest son, J. M. Cleveland, engaged with him in this war when he was only seventeen years of age. With this war closed the active military career of this brave soldier, who bravely and with devotion to the cause he espoused served with much honor to himself, until the oppressors of his country were completely subjugated and the homes and firesides of his countrymen were shielded from the Indian's fire torch and scalping knife. On his return to his native county the citizens were not slow to show their high appreciation of the true valor of him and his men. The old citizen's of Franklin remember him to this day. In 1838 and 1839 he was a member of the State Senate, placed there by an almost unanimous vote of his constituents. When his Senatorial term expired he returned and engaged in planting. In 1840, he moved to Troup Co., Ga., and there by continued industry and close economy he accumulated a healthy fortune.

In 1851 he settled in Stewart County and lived there twenty-nine years to the day of his death. Few men possessed a kinder heart and more unassuming manners than did Col. Benjamin Cleveland. He acted always from a conscientious conviction of being right. There never was a more ardent or purer patriot. His hospitality was boundless and accessible to all. It may be truly and emphatically said of him that he was a friend to the distressed. He was the architect of his own fortune, the only aristocracy that should be encouraged in this his beloved country. Col. Cleveland had the misfortune to lose five of his children. One of whom, Mr. John W. Cleveland, was murdered in the "Mountain Meadow Massacre" in Utah Territory; another son, Benjamin F. Cleveland, was killed near Richmond, Va., while loading a charger in Gen. Stewart's command against the enemy of a cause that both father and son most sacredly espoused. The others of those who are dead are Mrs. Amelia Garner, who died in _____ and Mrs. Martha Allen, first wife of a thrifty farmer and worthy citizen of Stewart Co., Mr. Churchhill Allen, who died in 1876. The others died before reaching the age of maturity. Of those living are R. H. Cleveland, of Louisiana, J. M. Cleveland, Mrs. N. J. Williams, and Mrs. T. C. Johnston, of Stewart Co., and Oliver C. Cleveland, of Terrell Co., Ga. All of these are well-to-do farmers and beloved citizens. Each of these too participated in the affairs of our late war. Mr. Oliver C. Cleveland, in whom it may truly be said is the true type of his family character, was a volunteer in the service of the United States against the Mexicans and was also a volunteer and brave soldier in the Confederate service under Gen. John H. Morgan. Col. Cleveland leaves forty grandchildren, and a number of great-grandchildren, surrounded by hosts of friends who join with them to mourn the loss of their grandfather. He left an impartial will to be executed by his faithful and eldest son, Mr. J. M. Cleveland, who is the true type of living of this father. Exact, strictly honest, and of irreproachable integrity, he stood by his father the years of his dotage and the hours of his illness, and up to the moment of his death. The family was called to mourn the death of their father on the 26th day of January, 1879. He had reached the advanced age of eighty-seven years. May he rest in peace.

This tribute was written upon the death of Benjamin Cleveland and published in the papers of the time, a copy of which is enclosed in the Family Bible of the Johnston Family, Mrs. Thomas C. Johnston (Harriett Cleveland) was his daughter, and died just three months subsequent to her father's death.

From Lewell's Hist Woburn, Mass — 1868.

Moses Cleaveland (or Cleveland, as the name is now more usually spelled, in conformity, it is understood, to the mode of spelling it in England,) came to this country, says family tradition, with his master, a joiner from Ipswich, in the county of Suffolk. He early took up his abode in Woburn, as appears by the town records, which under date of 3d of Feb. 1648-9, mention a committee appointed to layout the portion of land which had been promised him. He married Ann, daughter of Edward Winn (born in England) 26th Sept. 1648; had by her the following children viz: 1. Moses, born 1st Sept. 1651; Hannah b. 4th Aug. 1653, married to Tho. Henshaw, 1677; 3d Ann, born 10th Jan. 1654-5; 4th Samuel b. 9th June, 1657; 5th Miriam b. 10th July, 1659, m. a Hardick or Hackell, of Charlestown; 6th Joanna b. 16th Sept. 1661, d. 2d July 1667; (7) Edward, b. 20th May, 1663; (8th) Josiah b. 26th Feb, 1666-7; (9th) Isaac b. 11th May, 1669; (10th) Joanna b. 5th Sept. 1670, m. a Keyes of Chelmsford; (11) Enoch born 1st Aug. 1671. Moses Cleveland Sr died 9th Jan. 1701-2: no record of his wife's death.

Four children of Moses Cleveland, Jr. seem to have settled in Massachusetts — the name of Alexander now here appears.

Dr Sir

Yours favour of the 28 August came to hand some days since. I now proceed to answer your enquiries in the best manor I can. you first enquiry — Revd John Cleveland, I refer you to Revd John A Davis address Toccoa City. Ga Air line R.R. or Mr I. ch Jackson now a member of Shoal creek Church address Savonia Hart Cty Elberton Toccoa R R. In regard to Genl Jas R. Wiley. I refer you to Oliver C. She found when she reached N.C. that he was a married man. what occured after I know but little only that - two daughters was the issue of that connection one marrying Micajah Stokes of Wilks Co. N.C. who was afterwards Governer of the State. the other married Gen Wilburn of N.C. Johna Cleveland living in N.C after the death of Montgomery married her and brought her to Tugaloo river in Franklin Co Ga. There were born to them before Johns death five children two sons Ben & Jack and three daughters. one married Bedney Franklin who founded Franklin College in Athens now the University of Georgia whose daughter married Chas J. McDonald to whose descendants whose descendant probably still live in the State but I have no knowledge of them: another married Mr Robert Bonner of Morgan Co Ga. a planter of some note the last married James Smith esqr. at my Fathers house who afterward became a promicient lawyer and lived in Macon Ga intill his death, his wife was in Atlanta on a visite to some of her relations in Atlanta some three years since John was wild reckless man if all accounts be true. his wife became religiously inclined and proposed to join the Baptist Church to which he sternly objected, and forbade her to do so; however she joined, and came home John said to Caty I suppose you have been Baptised She Yes. "Well" said John "by G- you shall have enough of it"

he then carried her to the River a short distance and emersed her nighty nine times more. some time after in a fight with a man named Bond he fell upon a stump broke his back of which he died. both of which are undoubted facts. with Abolans I was well acquainted he was quite eccentric and ~~crazy~~ cynical one of his peculiarities he drank no water for over twenty years. he died at my Father's house called for water about an hour before he died and drank of it heartily. after his wife's death (about which it was said there was some suspicious circumstances) he totally ignored his family denied that they were his refused to speak to them and to almost every body of his acquaintance except my Father and family; spent a good deal of his time at my father's house always carried an old smoth barrelled gun with which he passed a good deal of his time in the woods shot nothing but squirrels. I frequently accompanied him in his rambles. he would not shoot at any other game but squirrels, he was communicative to me & was a great favorite with him (some year before his death, he instituted a suit against his sons-in-laws for the recovery of his property which had been principally squandered

Mr. Jas Seaborn
Fair Play Mo

My Dr Sir. Yours of the 11th of May has come to hand. Your letter was indeed a surprise to me. I do recollect having seen a little boy Name Jimmy Seaborn

There were a great many Cleavelands living on Tuckaloo river from the time of my first recollections. Claiming to be different branches of the same family and as being illegitimate descendants of Oliver Cromwell by the Duchess of Cleveland X I think I first heard the tradition from the family of Genl Wm. R. Wiley, who was a natural son of a natural daughter of a natural daughter of the hero of King's mountain, who assumed the name of Cleveland. I do not think there is any thing in written history to confirm it. McCauly speaks of a Duchess of Cleveland as the mistress of either Charles the 1st or 2nd I forget which. My reading and recollection be right - her Name was Lezmour [Barbara Villiers Ld J] belonging to the court of St James at the time. Perhaps a mere honorary title for I do not recollect any historians mentions the title before or after the death of the two Charles's. I am of the opinion that the title originated an ended with her. Charles had no issue by her if they have any right to claim descent from the Duchess it appears it would be through Charles and not Oliver If she was the mistress of Charles the second it places them beyond a doubt that they are not the decendants of Oliver for Oliver was dead before the restoration and it appears probable that her decendants would emigrate after the accession of Jas 2d probably to Pennsylvania that being about the time that Penn colonised Philidelphia or soon after I think he got his grant from Chas 1st over a century before the revolution and gradually going south until the revolution found them in N.C. or they may have taken their name from the d—main which Charles bestowed on his Mistress. or some peculiar physical expertness

I am at a loss who your correspondent means by Col Ben Cleeveland whether the hero of Kings Mountain or his grand son ~~Lent~~ Ben. Cleeveland, the son of Devil John Cleeveland and Catherine Sloan alias Katy Montgomery alias Aunt Katy Cleeveland

All that I Know of the hero of Kings mountain is from what I have heard my Father and others say of him, The most of his services in the Revolution, with the exception of the battle of Kings mountain was of a partisan nature was much — addicted to plunder the Tories and some times probably mistook Whigh for Tory plunder. After he moved to Tugaloo ~~he~~ become verry corpulent ~~and~~ so much so that in warm weather he was obliged to wear a long Slip instead of his ordinary clothing: was at times very vindictive and ill, giving the Tories & horse thieves

no quarters sometimes perhaps upon very slight evidence. (he weighed two or three hundred pounds)
I heard a John Cleveland preach when quite a child he was from my recollection a man of at least eighty years probably over six feet high wore his snow white hair down to and below his shoulders and preached the veritable Maul Sermon whether it was original with him, I can not say. I have since heard it attributed to at least fifty others. I do not recollect at what time he died probably about 1823. I do not recollect ever to have heard that he was the brother of the hero of King's Mountain he must have lived in the Neighbourhood of Jeffrey or in Hart County from the direction he came to the Church.
There were several families of the name on both sides of the river in that Neighbourhood Robt George an Devil Bean. Who was the father of Jerry C. now living in Forsyth Co who could probably give you some information on the subject W. J. T.

Mr. Lyman to Draper. Dict, &c

Madison. Wisconsin

Dear Sir

I was shown a letter written by you to Jeremiah Cleveland of Montrose P. under date of March 2d 1874 in reference to the Cleveland family. I am very much interest as they are my ancestors. I am afraid I cannot aid you any as to facts or traditions about the family, but I might and will try if you will inform me of your plans &c. In other words if you are simply gathering facts, traditions, &c for general information of the family I might be able to get a few traditions but I could not prepare anything for publication, because I could not vouch for the facts. My source of information would simply be hearsay handed down from generation to generation. My mother (still living aged 86) is the daughter of Martha Lyman formerly Cleveland Still living aged about 88 and her sister Mrs Watson is still living aged about 84 I have heard my grandmother tell hundreds of stories about our ancestors but unfortunately she has nearly lost her mind in past few years, and could not now repeat them. Mrs Watson her sister, has full possession of all her faculties, and is a very bright old lady, and from her I might possibly gather some information

My folks are direct descendents of the parties about whose life re you are inquiring, and of Course I would take great pleasure and pains to aid you all I could. Hence I want to know just how to proceed. I suppose you already have some points and in order to prevent my going over the same ground it would be well for you to give me some idea of your sources of information. I suppose if Jeremiah Cleveland has answered your letters (and I feared he had not known my writing) he has written about who he is, and given his ancestors names re. And likely also written you about a book in M. re's printed in 1760 in London which he owns. This book was written by Wm Cleveland who claims to have been a natural Son of Oliver Cromwell by a wife Cleveland his mistress. I have not read it but have heard it discussed in our family and it has been suggested that it is a romance. I only speak from hear say as I have never read it. I have it now will read it This is claimed to be the origin of the family Name. I am not conversant with Cromwells life and dont know whether history speaks of his having had any children under such circumstances. The family tree runs something after this style to our immediat family

Mr. Cleveland - Son of Oliver Cromwell - proved to above Alexander Cleveland Senr. his Son born in England moved to Woburn, Mass - where he died.

Alexander Cleveland Jr. his son born in Nash and moved to Albemarle County Va where he died

John Cleveland son of Alex Jr born in Albemarle County Va and Dame place

Jeremiah Cleveland his son born and died in Dane County Wis. Memorandum. My impression now is that Col. Ben Cleveland was my grand Mothers = ("Serenth," Martha Cleveland) grand uncle and brother of ~~Alexander~~ Cleveland which would make him son of Alex Jr. I could never hear of any family bible or record of our family, and most of what I have is such information as was given me by elder members of my family. There certainly however must be Dane records and if I find the use made of them will justify the trouble will make an effort to find at least the dates of births etc. One of the Clevelands was killed at Yorktown and tradition says another at Bunker Hill. Ben fought conspicuously at Kingsmountain. And Ben- commonly called "judge" was a prominent Whig in North Carolina in revolutionary times and made himself very obnoxious to tories on account of his severe sentences on them. All of this and a number of small items I have heard grand Ma tell at our fireside long winter evenings, and I took great pleasure in listening. It has been my great desire to know more of these old people but I have been too busy all my life to give the matter much investigation. If anything I have said leads you into any new channel of investigation and I can be of any assistance I will gladly do what I can. but I warn you beforehand that I fear it will be very little and traditionary information I can give

Very Respectfully

P.S.
I enclosed a "memorandum" which is commonly accepted by my immediate family as "correct." You see they disallow the "Cleveland romance" It may be a true story; but am inclined to think not. If not it spoils a pretty family tree "minus the beginning"

P.S.S. In the life of Cromwell there is mention made to in 1640 Cromwell Contested Cambridge with the poet Clearelaud, a zealous royalist, and defeated him by one vote, and Clearelaud is reported to have said that one vote ruined both Church and Kingdom.

History of Clevelands

If the reader will examine Middlebroughs "New International Encyclopedia", he will find the derivation of the name Cleveland and the country from which the originated to be as follows:
Clif, Clef, Fr. Clive, Cleves, Cliffs plus land equals Cleveland. A hilly region with some picturesque fertile valleys forming the eastern part of North Riding of Yorkshire, England, between Whitby and the Tees. Some of the heights are marked by mounds called "Rouses." Many archeological relics have been found among the hills. It has become a populous mining district, owing to the discovery of limestone.

In 1851 an eminent English antiquarian wrote to Bishop A. Cleveland Coxe, of Buffalo, N. Y., that the Clevelands of America were descended from William Cleveland, who removed from York to Hinckley in Leicestershire, where he was buried a very old man in 1630. His son, Thomas Cleveland, became Vicar of Hinckley, the family state. One of his sons was John Cleveland, the poet; another son, Thomas Cleveland is thought to have been the father of Moses Cleveland, the emigrant, who came in 1635 from Ipswich, Suffolk County, England, to Massachusetts.

There is also a tradition that a Cleveland of Hinckley came over to Virginia, with Shepworth and Herrick. He was later, 1653, at Salem, Mass. His Coat of Arms gave proof that he was a very distinguished gentleman of England.

The Cleveland family have to their credit many illustrious names, both in England and the United States. The most celebrated on this side of the water was Grover Cleveland, three times a candidate and twice elected President of the United States. James B. Cleveland, of Oneonta, N. Y., published a book in three parts in 1891 about the Cleveland family. We had access to part I, and from it we glean the following information:

"From the year 1200 A.D. up to the present, the family have spelled the name in a variety of ways, sometimes the same individual in the family spelling his name at different times in his life in more than one way.

It is Cleveland and Cleveland. The last was one adopted by the members of the south & west of the United States. There used to be a "de" before the name, but that was dropped when they emigrated to this Country as being undemocratic. Sir Guy de Cleveland was knighted at the siege of Boulogne by the King & was therefore entitled to have a coat of Arms, a crest and motto. (For description of crests & coat of Arms see J. B. Cleveland's book about the Clevelands).

For given names the Clevelands used Bible names of abstract qualities, as Faith, Hope, Justice, Abigail, Abraham, Benjamin, Jacob & by no means were Joseph and Egyptian wife, Asenath, forgotten. James B. Cleveland deals mostly with part of Cleveland ancestry descended from Moses Cleveland,

Who came to Massachusetts in 1635. Many Counties & towns are named for him. Cleveland, Ohio, one of the largest Cities in U.S. named for a Cleveland.

From D.A.R. Magazine, 1719.

All Clevelands, except the New England stock, descended from Alexander Cleveland, Sr. He settled in Virginia & had at least one son, Alexander, Jr. b. Culpeper Co. born 1667. He married Margaret McMinn, & they had the following Children: John, Alexander, Micajah, Elizabeth, Jeremiah, Jacob, Martha, Reuben, Daniel, Larkin. Jeremiah, Jr. had at least two Children: Reuben & Jacob. My Ancestor, Jacob, was born in Culpeper County, Va., May 1739. He married Milly White, Oct 16, 1756. She was a sister of Rev. John White, Baptist minister of Virginia, & also Rev. Cleaveville, Jr., Elbert County.

From Colonial records of North Carolina, a letter from M.N. Cleveland, Secretary to Admiralty, commanding a certain conference, formed a distinct association, & that the ministers belonging to this were: Geo. M. Neal, John Cleveland, Wm. Pitty, Wm. Stone, Cleveland Co's, Andrew Baker & John Stone.

John Cleveland, son of Alexander, Jr., & Margaret McMinn Cleveland & father of Benjamin, John, Roberts, & Jeremiah, died about 1778. He settled early in 1700 in Orange County, Va.

Robert Cleveland was father of sixteen Children & his wife, [illegible], was grandmother of Miriam Georgia Clevelands.

Wheeler, in his history of North Carolina, page 462, has this to say of Benjamin Cleveland: "Col. Benjamin Cleveland, hero of King's Mountain, after whom Cleveland County is named, lived & died (a mistake, he died on Tugaloo River, [illegible] Co. Ga. See [illegible] history) in Wilkes County, N.C. Cleveland County was formed in 1841 out of Rutherford & Lincoln Counties. He was a brave & meritorious soldier. A serious impediment in his speech prevented his entering political life. However, he was a Senator to General Assembly from Wilkes County in 1779. In 1775 he was appointed ensign in second regiment of troops & served in battle of Kings Mountain. Hero of one hundred fights with Tories. Surveyor of Wilkes County N.C. Capt. Robert Cleveland was little less distinguished than his brother, & was with him in a majority of his campaigns.

— From V. Magazine, Vol. 7.

Letter written to Dr. Draper from Maj. Red.

"The Clevelands, or the grandparents of Col. Cleveland, died about 1770. I do not know there given names. The father of Col. Cleveland was named John. He & his wife were living in 1774. How much longer they lived, I do not know. I never knew the Clevelands claimed decent from Oliver Cromwell. Clayby & Smith, who married two of Col. Cleveland's sisters, were a man of but little note. Franklin, who married the other, was a man of very fine standing in the County.

"I do not know what became of Clayby. Smith moved to Kentucky. Franklin moved to Surry County, N.C., settling on Mitchell's River & lived there until his death. He raised a large family of children, some of whom became noted & distinguished. James was a member of the United States Senate, & afterwards Governor of N.C. Micajah, the younger brother, was a member of Congress from the same State several years. Ludwig, the youngest, a Methodist Preacher became a man of considerable distinction.

"Col. Benjamin Cleveland & Martin Sumpter were the best of friends in their youthful days. Col. Cleveland was born & raised in the southern part of Orange, Virginia, 6 or 8 miles from the mouth of a north side branch of the Rapidan River, called the Blue Run. Joan Cleveland, the father of Col. Benjamin Cleveland, lived & died at this place. The mother, in her recollection, the settlement of her, as well as of grandfather & grandmother, lived until they were one hundred years of age, & what is very remarkable, they died very suddenly & within 2 or 3 days of each other. Col. Cleveland had four brothers & three sisters.

"Benjamin was the eldest. Col. Cleveland & John Cleveland & wives were members of the Baptist Church, & doubtless members of the Blue Run Baptist Church.

There is a stream about a mile northeast of Barboursville, Va., called Cleveland's Run. It was named for the Clevelands, as they lived near it.

History of Spartanburg County, by Landrum, mentions Benjamin, John & Robert. John, the second son, Baptist minister of good standing, influence & ability. Robert Cleveland, Captain in his brother's regiment in the battle of King's Mountain. Among his children were Jeremiah & Jesse. Jesse emigrated from Wilkes County, N. C., in 1810, merchandising business. His son, Robert Easley Cleveland, graduated from Charleston Medical College, interested in the affairs of the town, successful in the treatment of typhoid, man of extensive reading & information. He was hospitable in home & social in nature. He was survived by Hon. John B. Cleveland & Dr. Jesse F. Cleveland.

We learn from the state records of N. C., 1781, that Captain John Cleveland, probably the son of Benjamin Cleveland, was appointed by the House of Commons to command troops.

John Cleveland, father of Rev. John Cleveland, was born about 1667 & died about 1778. He left a will in which he mentions daughters Mary Franklin, Betty Cleary, Patty Smith; sons Benjamin, John, Robert, Reuben (deceased), Jeremiah; & grandchildren, Betty Austin Smith. No mention was made of a wife. In 1779 an appraisement was made of John Cleveland.

From James B. Cleveland's book on the Clevelands.

John Cleveland, the second son & third (of Col Benjamin) child of John Cleveland & Martha Coffee Cleveland, was born about 17~~40~~ 38 in Orange County, Va., & died about March, 1825*, at Cleveland's Ferry, S. C. (~~[illegible]~~ Knox's Bridge & now ~~[illegible]~~) about ~~90~~ 87 years of age. He & 3 brothers are said to have been at the Yorktown surrender. The Children of John Cleveland were: John, Neal Cornelius, William, Fanny, Elizabeth, Jeremiah, Mary, Larkin & Benjamin. Rev. John Cleveland & one of his brothers went from Virginia about 1772-75, journeying on pack horses, & cut their way through brush as they traveled. When he would preach the wicked people would take him out & beat him severely, but he would preach on, & when they let him go, would mount a stump or log & finish his sermon. They came to Pickens District, S.C., & one of the first settlers. They lived in Pendleton District at Clevelands Ferry. The Clevelands lived mostly in what is now Oconee County. He was one of the very first settlers of Franklin County Ga. (now Oconee Co. S.C.), about 1785 (then inhabited by Indians). His home was on Tugaloo River, where he dwelt many years & reared his family, who settled at various points along the river. He was kind to his neighbors & the poor and to his many darkies, who thought their master better than any other man.

* another record says John Cleveland was 87 yrs of age at death.

He was living with his daughter, Elizabeth, at the time of his death. Elizabeth was born at Cleveland's Ferry, married Benjamin Harrison of Carnesville, Ga. Her father was an old man in 1818 according to record. He was the first pastor of the first Baptist Church known as Tugaloo River in Franklin Co. Ga., in 1789. It should be noted here that Franklin County Ga., in 1789 included what is now (1933) Hart, Madison, Oglethorpe, Clarke, & Conee, & a large territory in the forks of Seneca & Tugaloo rivers in (Anderson Co) S. C.

In the old records of Carnesville Ga. in 1825 John Cleveland was listed as one of those entitled to draw land in two drawns because he was a Revolutioner", but this was the year he died.

At Carnesville, Ga., there is a record of Thomas Gilbert (a minister) will made in 1810. He wills all his estate to Polly & Betty, saying they took care of him in old age & that he had already given to his other children. Polly & Betty willed the said estate to their nephews, Cornelius & Thomas Cleveland. Reuben Cleveland was the father of Cornelius & Thomas & the son of one John Cleveland. By the will we see he had to be the son of one of Gilbert's five daughters. Doubtless his father was the John Cleveland who was the son of Rev. John Cleveland. It has been said John was his eldest child.

Thomas Gilbert (a Rev. S.) was born in Orange County, Va. He was of English descent. He married Ann Farneyho, of Virginia & Maryland. He was a large land owner, owning one hundred thousand acres of land in north Georgia & Tennessee & had many slaves. He died at the age of 90, about 1820-25.

Reuben Cleveland married Nancy Bryan, issue - John Ashley, Obadiah, Thomas & Cornelius boys; Rebecca, Alpha, Elizabeth & Hannah, girls. Hannah m a man named Farr. Ashley m Mary Skelton. Reuben Cleveland lived in 1837 on Whinnery's Creek on Reed Creek highway, 4 miles north of Hartwell, Ga. Place owned in 1933 by his grandson G. J. Cleveland.

Obadiah, the son of Reuben Cleveland, married Ann Skelton in 1840, she died 1885, issue Mary, Milly, Rachael, Milly & Clarissa, girls. Wesley, Hymer, Turam & Vandiver boys. The father was killed in Confederate war near Macon Ga. His grave is unknown.

In 1851 Obadiah bought a plantation from his father & while living there the following children were born there. Geo. Washington, Jasper Marion, Andrew Jackson, King David, John Wesley, & Thomas Jefferson who lived to be grown men. Two sons & one daughter died in infancy. G. at King's Mountain. His record is in Lineage Book 2, D. A. R.

Cleveland. Benjamin was born in Prince William county, Virginia in 1738. While still very young he married Mary Graves of a wealthy and influential family. With others he made a trip to Kentucky to see the country and to hunt. The mountain tories raising the British flag in 1776, Cleveland vanquished them with his company of volunteers. He served throughout the Revolution and is considered one of the ablest colonels, whereever he was placed. At King's Mountain he commanded the men from Surry and Wilkes. Draper, Wheeler, and others give much space to his able services.

Larkin was a brother to Benjamin, and while on his way to King's Mountain encountered a party of tories at Loveday Shoals and was wounded.

Robert, another brother, was a captain of infantry at King's Mountain. He died in Wilkes county in 1812.

John, a son of Colonel Cleveland, was born in Virginia in 1760. He entered the service as a private, but was a lieutenant under Shelby in the attack on Augusta in 1780. He led a company at King's Mountain, and was in the fight at the Raft Swamp in 1781. He died on the Tugalo in 1810. His son Benjamin was a prominent citizen of Habersham county, Georgia.

Ezekiel was in the engagements at Kettle Creek, Wofford's Iron Works, Musgrove's mill, Fishdam Ford,, Lone Cane Creek, and King's Mountain. For his service at Augusta in 1780 he had a grant of land from Georgia. His wife was Elizabeth Harman. Their daughter Nancy married William Henry Hardin, son of a soldier of the Revolution. Descendants are in Georgia.

Clon. William is listed by Draper as in Shelby's command.

Cloud. Joseph was a captain under Cleveland. Carruther speaks of him in his "Sketches of North Carolina."

Clowney. Samuel left Ireland with one companion and settled on the Catawba. He was in many battles of the Revolution, and is thought to have been under Colonel Brandon at King's Mountain. After the war he married and settled in Union district, South Carolina, where he died September 27, 1824, aged eighty-one. Both Draper and the Habersham Collections give much Jeremiah Cleveland's Will and Probate.

State of Georgia, } In the name of God, Amen.
Hart County } I, Jeremiah Cleveland of said State & County, being of advanced ages but of sound mind disposing mind and memory, knowing that I must shortly depart this life, deem it right and proper both as respects myself and myself, that I should make a disposition of the property with which a kind Providence has blessed me. I do therefore make this my last will and testament, hereby revoking all others by me here to fore made.

1st I desire and direct that my body be buried in a decent and Christian like manner, suitable to my circumstances and condition in life.

2nd I desire and direct that all my just debts be paid without delay by Executors hereinafter named and appointed.

3 I give, bequeath and devise to my Clara during her life time all my property both real and personal of every kind & description which I direct and give as follows, to wit:

4 I give to my son Milton M. Cleveland, five Hundred Dollars, before there is any division of my estate.

5 I give to each of my children (except Mrs. Mary Sewell, I give her five dollars, whom I consider I have already given more than an equal share) living, and if dead, to their heirs, an equal share in the remainder, after each heir pays its indebtedness to the estate.

6 I hereby appoint and constitute my sons B. F. & M. M. Cleveland, and Ira W. Randall, Executors of this my last will and testament.

This 1st October, 1880. Jeremiah Cleveland

In the name of God Amen,

I Jesse Walton of the State of Georgia, Franklin County being in a low state, altho in perfect mind and memory, being disirous of settling all my affairs in this life, do contibute this my last will and testament requesting all others & first I request that I be decently buried, and all my just debts paid, the residuing part of my estate to be disposed of in the following manner (Item) I give and bequeath to my loving wife Mary all my household furniture the balance of my estate I request- to be equally divided between my wife and my children, as soon as my son George arrives to the age of twenty one years. It is to be remembered that I did some time past give my son Walker Walton two negroes (towit) Smart-and Kyme, together with some land, all which is to be considered in part of his dividend of my estate. I do also request that my loving wife Mary and My friend Larkin Cleveland, be Executors of this my last will and testament, revoking all others, I acknowledge this to be my last will and testament, in witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this thirteenth day of June Anno Domini one thousand and seven hundred and Eighty nine.
